CARMEL BEACH is a primary source of recreation for many Carmel area youngsters, but Carmel — despite years of discussion and debate — still has no formal, organized recreation program for either young people or seniors. Mayor Charlotte Townsend thinks the posture of the council is emotion rather than reason, and she thinks Carmel would "cut off its nose to spite its face" if it chose not to participate in the project. Although hers may be a voice crying in the wilderness, the mayor would like the council to resolve its differences with the county through communication and negotiation, and not make the water management project a political issue. (Alan McEwen photo).

Carmel willing to use water to stifle growth

By ROBERT MISKIMON

FRUSTRATED with planning and land use decisions by Monterey County, the Carmel City Council is ready to play hardball with the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District to restrict water for future development.

Council members — with the exception of Mayor Charlotte Townsend — feel they have been forced to use water as a planning tool ("weapon" might be a more appropriate word) to bring about the kind of controls which they feel the county has failed to enact.

Four of the five council members registered a protest at their Aug. 3 meeting against participation in Zone 2 of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District plans to develop additional supplies of water. And little has changed to indicate that the council won't follow through when it considers the matter again Sept. 7.

If the council decides not to participate, it means that Carmel residents would not be permitted to vote on the proposal to build an $77 million dam with 27,000 ac. ft. storage capacity on the upper Carmel River; it also means Carmel would not be entitled to additional supplies of water from the dam or from other new sources, including the Seaside aquifer, according to water district manager Bruce Buel.

Although water consumption in Carmel runs close to 91 percent of its annual allocation, as set by the water management district, a majority of the council appears willing to forego additional water supplies on the basis that Carmel is almost completely isolated. Mayor Charlotte Townsend thinks the posture of the council is emotion rather than reason, and she thinks Carmel would "cut off its nose to spite its face" if it chose not to participate in the project.

Although hers may be a voice crying in the wilderness, the mayor would like the council to resolve its differences with the county through communication and negotiation, and not make the water management project a political issue.

Wants police log

Dear Editor:

I have subscribed to the Pine Cone for about two years now, and I enjoy and look forward to receiving it each week.

I was shocked to learn that the police log might be eliminated.

The police log reflects what a small town police dept. is all about. Helping people, and responding to each and every call no matter how small it might be.

I visit Carmel every chance I get as it's my favorite town, and I hope to settle there some day soon.

I really believe the police log should be continued in your fine paper because I believe it stands as a reminder to not only the people who live and work in the Carmel area, but to others who take your paper who don't live in the area, what a safe and friendly town Carmel really is, and I know will remain.

What are state plans?

Dear Editor:

The road map of California shows four main highways north to south between San Francisco and Los Angeles — Routes 99 — 5 — 101 and 1.

Highway 1 is dual carriageway most of its length but with a noticeable gap from Carmel to Morro Bay.

As a Carmel resident, before I express opinions on relative merits of widening Highway 1 or the Hatton Canyon alternative, it seems important — maybe vital — to know the long term plans of the State Highway Department, south of Carmel.

It seems to me a natural that they have considered a carriageway along the crest of the coastal hills.

May we be told if this is so, and also forecasts of traffic growth and origins and destinations?

It will not just stop: now I think, can it all go down Carmel Valley Road?

'No redwood forest'

Dear Editor:

Your recent article about Peter Scott, who has planted thousands of redwoods in the Carmel area during the past 12 years, is prompting me to write a letter which I had been meaning to write for several months.

I had become aware that the vegetation in Carmel was undergoing a change: more cypresses and redwoods had been planted around town. As Peter Scott was quoted as having said: "This is a very long-lasting and environmentally changing thing I'm doing."

Exactly my point! Now please do not misunderstand me. I applaud Mr. Scott's initiative and dedication and appreciate his motive. But I, for one, do not want to live in a redwood forest. When I drive through Palo Colorado Canyon and Robinson Canyon, I admire the beauty of the trees but am also very happy that I don't live in such deep shade.

Even on sunny days, one can observe that the residents have to keep electric lights on in their homes. The same is true for the areas of Carmel Point where the cypresses have grown to maturity.

It puzzles me that such potentially drastic changes, which will affect all residents, are permitted.

A Carmelite of 25 years.

Calls for DA probe

William D. Curtis, District Attorney

I attach a letter and its accompanying return post card for your examination. I received it in the mail at my personal home address over the weekend. It bore a Carmel post mark with the date of Aug. 7.

It is my opinion that the letter is both improper and misleading. I feel it is improper for a sitting judge to lend his name to a petition activity, especially when it appears — at least on the surface — that the object of this activity is to circumvent a process which has been successfully conducted according to law.

I feel it is misleading in that the carefully worded letter and post card is clearly meant to persuade the registered voters of Carmel Woods, such as myself, to become confused and to change our minds. The phrase on the post card, "I did not intend my signature to have the effect of depriving me of my opportunity to vote on the issue," stands alone and is provocative.

The post card is addressed to William Burleigh, and on the other side it reads: "To: Carmel Woods Annexation Conducting Authority." This clearly is meant to imply that he, personally, is the "conducting authority." He is not.

It is ridiculous to counter the above statements by saying that Mr. Burleigh nowhere uses his title of judge; he has just handily won a hard-fought and expensive election campaign designed to make his name a household word. There are very few people who would receive a letter signed "William Burleigh," and not say to oneself, "Oh, It's from Judge Burleigh!" I find this intimidating.

The City of Carmel-by-the-Sea has long attempted to govern an area far wider than its boundaries by calling this area a "sphere of influence," often going to court to get its way, using tax funds to pay court costs and its own city attorney, while those opposed must dig into their own pockets. I feel this mailing reflects the City's unofficial efforts.

I hereby formally request that you study the matter of the Carmel Woods Annexation move with a view instigating a Grand Jury investigation.

The year ahead may prove to be land use crossroads

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE COMING YEAR may well prove to be a crossroads in terms of land use decisions that will determine what kind of community Carmel, Carmel Valley and the rest of the Monterey Peninsula will be for decades.

As it appears now, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District will ask voters to decide the fate of a proposed $77 million dam with 29,000 ac. ft. storage capacity on the upper Carmel River. The project — if approved — theoretically would satisfy projected water needs to the peninsula through the year 2020.

Within the next six months to a year, the long-controversial Carmel Valley Master Plan, which defines growth limits in the Valley, will be revised and adopted by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. County supervisors have received a court-ordered environmental impact report on the plan but have not yet begun the laborious task of revision in accord with issues raised in the EIR.

In anticipation of the implementation of the Master Plan, developers have been unveiling their projects in recent weeks, and it is evident that the pressure for growth will only intensify once the lid is taken off permit approvals.

Coastal plans which permit growth and development in the unincorporated Carmel area, the Big Sur coast, and in Del Monte Forest — in various stages of completion and approval by the Coastal Commission — will most likely be the law of the land within the next year and permit approval for development will once again rest with Monterey County.

Meanwhile, there are signals that some citizens are not only aware that the community has reached a turning point, but are willing to take matters into their own hands to see that there are reasonable controls over growth that would threaten the quality of life which is one of the distinguishing characteristics of the Monterey Peninsula.

The VOTE (Vote on Tomorrow's Environment) initiative, which will go before voters in the November election, is the most profound manifestation of public discontent with the way things have been going at the county level. That initiative — clearly a slap in the face to county supervisors and planning officials — would require local voter approval in nine planning areas before master plans for unincorporated areas could be adopted.

The mere fact that petitioners obtained 10,000 signatures is an indication of widespread distrust with county government and a sense that the people must take extraordinary steps to control their own planning destiny.

The preferable alternative, of course, would be for the citizens to elect public officials at the county level in whom they can invest a high degree of trust to make land use decisions that reflect their best interests. The VOTE initiative, it seems, stems from chronic frustration that those officials have not acted in what many perceive to be the public interest.

The Carmel City Council, in a stunning display of frustration over years of insensitivity by county officials over growth and development at the mouth of Carmel Valley and in the unincorporated area around Carmel, may not participate in a proposed water project zone of the Monterey Peninsula Management District to develop new water supplies for the future.

Their reasoning is that water is an effective planning tool which, if denied, can be used to slow or halt growth and development. Behind that conclusion is the sense that county government has too often yielded to pressures for more and more development, without taking into account the wishes of those who have made their homes here because they like the community small, quiet, and clean.

Conflicting pressures — for and against growth and development — will come into sharper focus in the months ahead and the outcome will have ramifications for decades and generations to come. This time, however, the people who want clear limits on growth to maintain quality of life are awake, aware, and ready to do battle.

Planning commission to define 'subsidiary business'

THE CARMEL Planning Commission is expected to study definitions of subsidiary businesses and photographic processing laboratories when it meets at 4 p.m., Wednesday, Aug. 18 at city hall.

The definitions have been requested by the Business License and Code Review Board in response to several meetings on the legality of the Carmel PhotoArt store in the Paradise building, northeast corner of Ocean Avenue and Dolores Street.

The Land Use Committee of the planning commission was expected to formulate a definition this week. The recommendations will be presented to planners at the regular Aug. 18 meeting.

The city does not have a specific definition in the code to govern automatic photographic processing businesses in the commercial district.

"They need to talk about whether it is a bad use or a good use and whether they should allow it on Ocean Avenue," Planning Director Bob Griggs said.

Griggs pointed out that if the commission decided to prepare recommendations to the city council on a definition, a public hearing would be scheduled.

The city has an ordinance that restricts photo processing, but the regulations do not specifically cover the new automated one-hour processing machines that are operated at Carmel PhotoArt, Griggs said.

Carmel PhotoArt is also involved in a second issue before planners: whether the city needs to change the definition of a subsidiary business.

The question raised by the Business License and Code Review Board is whether the processing division of Carmel PhotoArt is the primary or secondary business. The Carmel PhotoArt business license lists the art gallery downstairs as the primary business.

Under city regulations, the primary use must generate 51 percent of the gross sales. Business License and Code Review members have indicated they do not believe that the art gallery and supply sales at Carmel PhotoArt generate the required 51 percent.

The board on July 15 ordered Carmel PhotoArt to present documentation by Oct. 21 that the gallery and retail sales gross 51 percent of the business income.

If those sales do not amount to 51 percent, the board may revoke the PhotoArt business license. A final action may also hinge on a city definition of subsidiary businesses.

Replace second-story shops with apartments?

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

CARMEL GENERAL Plan Advisory Committee member Gene Hammond has proposed a 20-year amortization program to eliminate retail businesses located above other retail businesses within the same structure.

Hammond thinks the city should require landlords to replace those businesses with apartments.

The plan, which would drastically alter the downtown commercial district, could provide more housing, stop the spread of tourist-oriented businesses, and help alleviate parking and traffic problems, says the author of the proposal.

The current city ordinance that governs businesses on two levels of a building is "ambiguous and unenforceable" because second stories are not defined. The ordinance also does not include specific amortization programs to eliminate those uses, he said.

Hammond made his presentation to the General Plan Advisory Committee Aug. 5. It is scheduled to be discussed again when the panel meet at 7:30 p.m., Aug. 19 at city hall.

The committee is studying proposed revisions for the 1973 Carmel General Plan. Those changes are expected to be proposed to the planning commission this fall. The commission will hold public hearings before it makes recommendations to the city council for action.

"There's no time left for small dreams. We've got to do it and we've got to do it big," Hammond said in his presentation to the committee.

Hammond proposes that the city confine all tourist-oriented businesses to the C-1-C

Hammond said. "I don't have answers to all of the particulars. This could be left up to the city council, which is the policy-making body of the city."

Amortization does not mean that the city will have to "buy-off" the landlords, Hammond pointed out. He said the amortization process means that the city just has to grant landlords a reasonable amount of time to recover their investments.

Hammond suggested that the proposed citizen's committee could be the negotiator for the "reasonable time" agreement between landlords and the city.

The city has included amortization proceedings in almost all of its new ordinances that create non-conforming uses.

"Amortization has been a cop-out for 40 years Hammond said. "The city council has not faced up to amortization. I think if we're going to save this town at all, we have to have amortization. It may take 20 years. It doesn't start until you start it."

Hammond pointed out that the proposal would not only allow the city to eliminate some tourist-oriented businesses, but it would also alleviate some parking and traffic problems.

"You have three or four employees driving here to work in exchange for one or two people with maybe one car living in an apartment," he said. "Naturally traffic and parking problems will be reduced."

Hammond also believes that the loss of sales tax revenue would probably not adversely affect the city.

"It would obviously have some effect on sales. A permanent resident would buy more in town than three employees. That may offset the loss of sales tax. I have no idea. It would perhaps have a slight decrease in the sales tax," he said.

'Back in the early days before the commercial district was as strong as it is now, we had a lot of people living in houses downtown... It seems to me that if we could get more residents downtown, we could get more resident-oriented, businesses downtown.'

district, which is basically the downtown core which surrounds the Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street intersection.

The city now allows C-1-C uses in the C-1-S zone, which is designated for services, such as dry cleaners, tailors and clothing stores. The C-1-S zone is adjacent to the C-1-C zone and it also includes Carmel Plaza.

"As the C-1-C gets more full, it would expand into the C-1-S zone under the present code," Hammond said. "I don't want that, and I don't think the committee wants that." The quick way to solve the problem is to no longer allow C-1-C uses which are basically tourist-oriented in the C-1-S district, which provides services, he said.

Hammond also proposes that the C-1-C uses in the C-1-S zones be amortized by the city to encourage more resident-oriented businesses.

But the main focus of discussion at the General Plan Committee meeting was the proposed elimination of retail uses above other retail businesses.

"Back in the early days before the commercial district was as strong as it is now, we had a lot of people living in houses downtown," Hammond said. "It seems to me that if we could get more residents downtown, we could get more resident-oriented businesses downtown."

HAMMOND proposed that the city council appoint a special citizen's committee to review amortization proceedings.

Under his proposal, a landlord would be given a certain amount of time to keep the second story business open until "his investment is recouped." Then, he would have to convert the space into apartments.

Hammond said the city could allow a landlord some kind of density bonus to develop smaller apartments to help the owner recover investments.

"All of this needs to be worked out. I just want to lay it on the table for discussion,"

IF THE committee modifies his recommendations and recommends that his proposal be included in the general plan, Hammond believes it may eventually be approved by the council.

"Assuming the committee comes back with recommendations and assuming that the proposal is sent to the planning commission, I would say its chances of going all the way are good."

Hammond is uncertain whether his proposal will generate large-scale opposition in the business community.

"I have no idea. If it generates more attendance, that in itself is worthwhile," he said. "We have had no attendance from the business people and property owners at our meetings. If they would come and let us know their feelings, it would be helpful."

Hammond's fellow committee members favored the proposal, but failed to give it whole-hearted support until it could be studied further and reviewed Aug. 19.

On a motion by member Ed Lee and seconded by Gordon Campbell, the committee agreed "in concept" with the idea. Also in favor were Dottie Lillard, Ed Lee, Hazel Mohler and Hammond. There were no dissenting votes, but those who abstained included Alan Williams, Anne Woolworth, Jean Grace, Jack Billwiller and Helen Robinson.

"I think it's a neat idea in concept. It's far-sweeping and it has a big impact. I just think it needs more study," Williams said.

Throughout the discussion, committee members indicated a general agreement with the plan.

"I think the concept is excellent and its time has come," Campbell said.

Williams said he is concerned with the apartment-only stipulation for the spaces above retail businesses. "I'm not at all against the unstacking of retail space, but I think there should be provisions for offices, bars, and tailors."

Williams said Hammond's proposal would create a scarcity of sites for resident-oriented businesses. He suggested provisions to allow resident-oriented businesses or offices to occupy second-story sites.

Williams also questioned the future of the one-square-block Carmel Plaza. The Plaza has three levels.

"This is a big enough entity that would have to be dealt with individually," Hammond said. "I would hate to see the Plaza be the thing that caused something like this not to happen. I could care less about the Plaza. I would hate for the Plaza to be the thing that defeats this."

Hammond, who has been a resident of Carmel for 10 years, was mayor in 1976 and also served on the city planning commission.

A PROPOSAL by member Gene Hammond to amortize retail uses above street-level retail stores will be discussed by the Carmel General Plan Advisory Committee at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 19 at city hall. A proposed modification to the plan would allow "resident-oriented" businesses to occupy the second story spaces, such as some of the shops in Sunset Terrace, north side of Eighth Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets. (M.G. photo).

Sanitary district expects approval of water reclamation grant

THE CARMEL Sanitary District expects to receive notification "any day now" that its $18.4 million water reclamation project will be 75 percent funded by the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

The EPA grant is the last hurdle before construction can begin on the project which is designed to increase sewage capacity and to provide reclaimed water for irrigation of local golf courses.

"We're going to get the money; there's virtually no doubt about it. I can't say definitely that we have it until we do. We anticipate the grant notification any day now," district manager Michael Zambory said.

Once the federal EPA grant is approved, there is almost an "iron-clad guarantee" that the state Water Resources Control Board will immediately authorize a second grant for 12.5 percent of the cost of the project, Zambory said.

"They go hand in hand. Once you get the federal grant, you're almost guaranteed the state grant. You can't get a state grant without the federal grant," Zambory said.

The state Water Resources Control Board acts as an agent for the EPA in grant awards.

Under the financing plan for the project, the state and federal grants will fund $16.1 million of the cost. The Carmel Sanitary District, through the issuance of bonds, will pay about $1.6 million and the Pebble Beach Sanitary District has agreed to provide the remaining $760,000.

The Carmel Sanitary District Board of

Nuclear war film Aug. 16

"The Last Epidemic," a film which depicts the medical consequences of nuclear war, will be shown at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Aug. 16 at Sunset Center in Carmel, sponsored by the Carmel City Council.

The film will be introduced by Dr. Arnold Manor of Carmel, retired gynecologist, and Max Tadlock, president of Monterey Peninsula College. It will be shown free of charge.

Directors will hold a special meeting once the grant notification is received. At that session, directors must pass a resolution of acceptance of the grant and file formal contracts with the state.

Under terms of the grant contracts, the state will reimburse the district for costs of the project on a monthly basis.

"This is a big deal for us," Zambory said. "Once we get the money we're on the way."

Once all of the contracts receive official approval, the district will hire a construction management consultant and call for bids on the project.

There are three separate construction projects: an outfall line, the treatment plant itself, and a pipeline that will run from the existing treatment plant site near the mouth of the Carmel River through Carmel and into Pebble Beach to Spanish Bay, Zambory said.

If work on the projects goes as planned, the outfall line will be under construction in February of 1983 and finished in May. The pipeline construction is to begin in April of 1983 and to be completed in April of 1985.

The plant will begin full operations in June of 1985, Zambory predicted.

The reclamation project plant will be constructed on district property south of Carmel River near Carmel Mission and west of Highway 1 adjacent to the Odello Ranch property.

The present plant, located on the same property, will remain in operation. Only one building — a maintenance shop — will be demolished, Zambory said.

The plant was developed in response to a state order to cease the discharge of effluent into Carmel Bay between the months of October and May. The bay has been designated as an Area of Special Biological Significance (ASBS).

The effluent will be treated at a tertiary level and will be sold to area golf courses for irrigation.

In addition, because of the better facilities and reclamation, the plant sewage capacity will almost double from 2.4 million to four million gallons daily.

district the scapegoat for the planning policies of Monterey County.

"If there's any way we can bring it home to the county that their indiscriminate granting of permits is not acceptable, we should do it," declared Councilwoman Helen Arnold. "If they keep making wrong decisions, they can expect to see cities retaliate against them."

"I feel a dam can be very growth-inducing. The structure of the allocations is what bothers me," Mrs. Arnold said. "Should we be penalized because we don't participate? I don't think it would stop development if we didn't participate, but it might slow it. It won't hurt Carmel because we're 98 percent built out. We can get along on the allocation we have."

MRS. ARNOLD said she was not overly encouraged by a joint study session between the Carmel City Council and the Monterey County Board of Supervisors July 28, in which a number of planning and development issues were discussed.

"I would have liked to have it a more fruitful meeting," Mrs. Arnold said. "I was impressed with one supervisor's rudeness in coming a half-hour late and then walking around and talking to other people. It seems the higher up you go in the levels of government, the less the sensibilities of the ordinary citizens are observed."

Mrs. Arnold said she would not hesitate to vote against participation in the water project zone because "a lot of people look to Carmel

'We're mad at the supervisors and we're taking it out on the water management district. It's not looking at the situation clearly. I don't think it's very responsible. In the past, city councils have said, 'Go away and we'll play in our own little sandbox.' How parochial can you get?'

land use decisions made at the county level, then "it's high time you elect new people in Salinas," she said. Mayor Townsend said she feels it would be short-sighted for the council to refuse to participate in the water zone.

"That's cutting off our own nose to spite our face," she said. "How are our citizens going to feel if we refuse to plan ahead because past planning has been inadequate?"

"We're mad at the supervisors and we're taking it out on the water management district. It's not looking at the situation clearly. I don't think it's very responsible. In the past, city councils have said, 'Go away and we'll play in our own little sandbox.' How parochial can you get?"

COUNCILMAN David Maradei said water should be used as a planning mechanism only when other measures fail. He cited the recent defeat of a dam project in Marin County as evidence that citizens "voted to control their population by water."

"We have the opportunity to determine as an area whether we want to continue to grow and develop and to say that uncontrolled growth is not what we want," Maradei told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

"Water should not be used as a planning tool, but when all other measures fail, it is a last resort when we're put in a position to defend ourselves against growth we know is to our own detriment," Maradei said. "The whole history of California seems to be that water is the controlling factor in growth."

Maradei said he felt the joint council-supervisors meeting was worthwhile, although he isn't convinced that any real changes in county policy will result.

"I felt the board of supervisors was very concerned about growth but that they had restricted their thinking because they were tied to previous commitments — particularly in places like the mouth of the Valley. I don't see any will on the part of the supervisors to alter the situation."

Councilman Robert Stephenson believes water must be used, if necessary, to halt further growth and development on the Monterey Peninsula.

"I think the growth capacity of the area has already been reached," Stephenson said. Does he think water should properly be used as a planning mechanism?

"As a rule, no," Stephenson replied. "But when nothing else works, you grasp at straws. No, it shouldn't be used as a planning tool, but nothing else accomplishes the slowdown of development. If that is a way to coerce the county into looking at development differently, then we should do it."

The council is scheduled to resume discussion of the proposed water project zone at its Sept. 7 meeting after other cities of the Monterey Peninsula have decided whether to participate.

for leadership in environmental matters."

Councilman Frank Lloyd said he feels the council has been forced into using water as a planning tool by decisions at the county level.

"This does appear to be a tool of last resort," Lloyd said. "We've been terribly disappointed with the actions of the supervisors. Our water situation has been critical for years; in Carmel we're paying more for our water bills to pay for wells in Carmel Valley and for a pipeline to feed other communities."

"I don't see any great benefit to our participating in the zone," Councilman Lloyd said. "I can't see that it would mean less water for Carmel; we have only a very modest allocation now to allow full buildout. Basically, I don't feel we should join."

Mayor Charlotte Townsend said her service as a member of the Board of Directors of the Carmel Sanitary District firmly convinced her that planning issues should not be foisted upon service districts.

"Planning should take place at the county level," Mayor Townsend said. "It's unfair to service boards to expect them to do planning. They're not set up to do planning but to serve the people; planning is in no way a function of any of the service districts."

ALTHOUGH Carmel currently uses practically 91 percent of its water allotment by the Monterey Peninsula Management District, council members appear willing to deny the city additional water from a dam or other water projects undertaken by the water district. Council members say they are frustrated with lack of control over development in unincorporated areas of Monterey County, as reflected by planning and land use decisions by the board of supervisors. The council will reconsider possible participation in a water project zone when it meets Sept. 7. (R.M. photo).

Water supplies will restrict growth in Valley, county says

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THERE IS "probably not enough water available for any additional development" in Carmel Valley beyond legal lots of record and already-approved projects, according to a top Monterey County planning official.

Ray Lamb, assistant Monterey County planning director, said he will present the board of supervisors Aug. 17 with a water report that defines extremely limited growth potential for Carmel Valley and unincorporated areas, such as Del Monte Forest.

The board of supervisors is to hold a public hearing at 11:30 a.m. on the final priority distribution of water within the unincorporated California-American Water Co. service area.

Based on a water allocation formula approved July 12 by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, Monterey County is entitled to 6,501 ac. ft. per year, or 34.95 percent of the total available supply within the Cal-Am service area of 18,600 ac. ft. per year.

An acre foot is 325,851 gallons, or the amount of water required to fill an acre of land to one foot of depth.

Current demand within the unincorporated area of the county is 5,272 ac. ft. per year, which leaves 1,229 ac. ft. per year for additional development, according to a report prepared by Lamb to the board of supervisors.

Lamb recommends an allocation of 585 ac. ft. per year to Del Monte Forest and 644 ac. ft. per year to development in Carmel Valley and in the unincorporated Carmel area included in the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program.

"This means there would only be enough water for the existing legal lots of record and those projects already approved in Carmel Valley, such as Carmel Valley Ranch," Lamb told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "It means there probably would not be enough water available for any additional development, except for what has been already approved."

There are 832 existing legal lots of record in Carmel Valley, 401 in Del Monte Forest, 188 in the unincorporated Carmel area, and 88 in Carmel Highlands. The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District figures that the average residence in Carmel Valley uses .366 ac. ft. of water per year — more than the district-wide residential average of .282 ac. ft. per year.

The county planning department has estimated that Monterey County would need an additional 719 ac. ft. per year to accommodate development levels set forth in the Carmel Valley Master Plan and coastal plans for Del Monte Forest and the Carmel area.

THE 1980 Carmel Valley Master Plan envisions an additional 2,500 dwelling units in the next two decades, while the Del Monte Forest Local Coastal Program would permit 1,148 additional residential units. The Carmel Area LCP would allow between 644 and 821 additional dwellings.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors has certified a court-ordered environmental impact report on the Carmel Valley Master Plan and should begin the task of revision of the plan near the end of August or first part of September.

Lynne Mounday, Monterey County environmental planner assigned to the Carmel Valley Master Plan, said the two biggest constraints on development in the Valley will probably be water supplies and traffic capacity.

"The staff is working up a report on the implications of the EIR for the Master Plan," Mounday said. "I hope to have it ready by the end of August or first of September. We will go through the EIR with a fine-tooth comb and pick out all the conflicting areas, so the policies in the plan do what the EIR says they should do."

"Whether there must be a reduction in the number of units allowed in the plan because of water and other constraints is something we'll also have to deal with," Mounday said. The planner said he feels the EIR, which was prepared under a Monterey County court order based on a legal challenge by the city of Carmel, may not be totally adequate.

"I'm disappointed in the EIR from the standpoint of insight — from the standpoint of proposing more development at the mouth of the Valley," Mounday said.

Development at the mouth of Carmel Valley has been a point of friction between Carmel and Monterey County in recent months, and the city of Carmel has threatened another lawsuit over recently-approved permits for commercial development in that area just south of Carmel city limits.

Carmel podiatrist emphasizes preventive care

By ANNE TELFORD

KAREN KIKER has entered her new profession feet first. She is a podiatrist, commonly known as a "foot doctor." While true, this is not a complete description since a podiatrist can deal with common foot ailments, sports-related problems and preventive medicine, as in making custom arch supports.

It is unusual to see a woman in this field, particularly such a young woman. Kiker, 26, graduated from the California College of Podiatric Medicine, in San Francisco, the only hospital in the United States devoted strictly to this specialty.

An English major at Oklahoma State University, she received a grant from the National Health Service to pursue her chosen field.

In exchange for tuition and living expenses, recipients of NHS grants are required either to go into private practice in counties that are under-served in podiatry or to join an NHS clinic as a partner/doctor. Graduates may choose from a list of counties, which is how Kiker ended up in Carmel.

"Carmel is a garden spot of the world," Kiker said of her new home. The weather is more conducive to sports in California than in her home state of Oklahoma — a salient factor, considering her interest in tennis. A member of the women's varsity tennis team at the University of Oklahoma, she traveled throughout the midwest to tournaments.

The first two years in podiatry school consist of the same basic science classes as medical school. The last two years you "zone in on the foot," Kiker explained. In the junior year students see patients in clinics and the last year is spent in an "externship," of short residencies in several different hospitals of the student's choice. During the externship students learn to relate to other specialties.

Kiker, who spent time in a Dallas hospital, remarked on the differences in attitudes towards health care between Texas and California. Diet is different in Texas and Oklahoma, she explained, people there tend to eat more meat, starches, and fried foods. Their diet is less nutrition conscious than Californians'. "A doctor's job is easier and more rewarding with people who care and will work with you," Kiker said.

A podiatrist doesn't want patients to stop playing a sport; he wants them to participate in an educated way. Consistent foot problems need attention and can cause other health problems that consequently become harder to treat. Kiker recommends conservative home treatments and consultation with a specialist if home remedies fail.

DR. KAREN KIKER consults with a patient in her office in Carmel. She is a podiatrist specializing in sports related medicine and foot surgery as well as podiatric medicine. (photo by Anne Telford)

KIKER SUGGESTED increasing the amount of time stretching and strengthening the muscles as you increase your running time. The best way to run if, for example, you run four miles, is to do the first mile slowly, as comfortably as you can; the second mile a little faster; third mile still faster and the fourth mile as slowly as you started. A shuffling gait as opposed to a bounding up and down gait will reduce stress.

Kiker offers more helpful advice for runners: If you are tired or sore from running, try alternating your days of heaviest training. If you have a running injury or pain, see a sports medicine doctor as soon as possible. A lot of minor pains can be resolved by avoiding running uphill or downhill, taking aspirin two hours before your run, icing the area for 20 minutes before and after running, taping and padding and wearing shoe supports that keep the foot in its neutral position, running more slowly in order to decrease stride distance or running on softer surfaces, such as grass.

A tall, attractive, athletic woman, Kiker prefers not to run but feels sports are good for people and she recommends running "if your feet can take it." She is more concerned with finding good tennis partners in the area!

Kiker said she will continue to make house calls. "I think there's a need for that." She visits some of her elderly patients in convalescent homes. For older people she suggested several helpful hints to avoid injury and problems:

- Use support hose if your ankles swell.
- Elevate your feet as much as possible, it helps the venous blood supply return to the heart. Poor circulation is often a problem with older patients. Diabetes and vascular disease increase circulation problems.
- If you can't bend over as well as you used to and can't do a good job of foot hygiene, find someone to help you so you avoid back strain and don't injure your feet.
- Buy shoes in the evening when your feet are swollen; it's better for your circulation to have loose shoes than tight shoes.

Right now her new practice, the Carmel Podiatry Group, is taking up most of her time, but she has an eye to the future. "Having a practice and a family is very feasible," Kiker said about podiatry. "There are very few medical fields where you can do that." Kiker has no immediate plans other than to work and establish herself in her field, but said she considers marriage and family as probable factors.

Approximately five percent of practicing podiatrists are women and 10 percent of students currently studying podiatry are women. In the United States there are approximately 8,500 licensed podiatrists or one to 25,000 people, compared to one medical doctor to 670 people.

She performs podiatric care for all age groups, minor surgery and sports related medicine in her office, Suite 105, 3855 Via Nona Marie, Carmel.

"You're busy with people. It's very rewarding, it's not like work to me," she says of her new job.

COMMON SERVICES provided by podiatrists include: routine trimming of corns, calluses and nails; sports medicine — the treatment of biomechanical problems seen in runners, tennis players, golfers and other athletes on their feet a lot; surgery of hammertoes, bunions, removal of extra bones or soft tissue that may cause problems; emergency care of ankle sprains, fractures, infections or other sports-related injuries involving the foot.

Kiker said common running problems involve corns, calluses, stress fractures, heel pain, arch strain, ankle sprain, shin splints, knee and lower back problems.

She explained that runners have more problems than walkers because: normally body weight goes through each foot when walking (assuming an average weight of 150 pounds); running generates much more force (about three times your normal weight) and running downhill magnifies the force to almost four times.

Pronation, or rotation forward and toward the midfoot, changes when running. The base of a person's gait when running is zero; walking has a wide stance. Women may have more problems with this because of their naturally wider pelvis. People with high arches may have shock difficulties and those with low arches may not be able to get back to a neutral position.

Kiker cites the "rule of three" as a major running-related problem; since three times the force goes through your feet when running, a mild imbalance may not be a problem when walking but may cause serious difficulties when running.

Preventative measures to avoid running injuries include proper shoes, stretching exercises before beginning a run, conditioning and changing gaits.

"There is no perfect running shoe for all people. The worst shoe for one runner might be the best for another," Kiker explained. She listed factors to consider when purchasing running shoes:

- Shoes should have three-quarters to one inch of rubber under the heel in order to absorb shock.
- A training shoe should have three-eighths to one-half inch of rubber padding under the ball of the foot (a difference of one-half to three-quarters inch between the heel lift and the ball of the foot).
- Toe box should have plenty of room fitted so that there is one-quarter inch between the longest toe and the end of the shoe.
- Shoes should always be fitted for the bigger foot, not the smaller. One-eighth to one-quarter inch of felt can be put under the tongue of the shorter shoe.
- The shoe should "breathe" so that excessive sweating doesn't occur.
- The heel cup should be firm and grasp the heel well.
- There should be some padding above the achilles tendon.
- Shoes with a flare on the heel greater than three inches are useful for lateral stability of the foot and ankle but may cause knee problems in some people.
- Check shoes for abnormal wear; if one heel wears more than the other you may be overstriding or have a limb length discrepancy. The heel counter of the shoe should ideally be perpendicular to the supporting surface.

We hope you will join us in preserving Big Sur

Since 1978, The Big Sur Land Trust has preserved over 4,275 acres of the Big Sur Coast, conservatively valued at over $6 million. Serving as a bridge between the private and public sectors, the Land Trust works to balance the land use problems resulting from more than 3.0 million visitors wanting to enjoy an area that is largely privately owned. To date, it has cost the Land Trust an average of $25 to preserve each acre of land. At that price, your membership can really make a difference!

Peters, Henson clash over EIR for Arroyo Seco dam

By ROBERT MISKIMON

IF THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District gives serious consideration to a dam on the Arroyo Seco River as a source of additional water, environmental effects of that project should receive the same analysis as another dam on the Carmel River.

So argued director Alexander Henson of Carmel Valley Monday as the district board of directors considered a scope of work for an $80 million water project, which includes a proposed new dam on the upper Carmel River with 29,000 ac. ft. storage capacity.

But director William Peters of Carmel Valley, for one, didn't buy Henson's argument.

Although the proposed Arroyo Seco dam, which would have 100,000 ac. ft. storage capacity, would be located outside the boundaries of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, it would require as much study as the Carmel River dam before it can be placed before voters, Henson argued.

The board approved a scope of work for an environmental impact report to cover the proposed Carmel River dam, additional underground storage in the Seaside aquifer, and a water conservation program. It also decided to study further water reclamation and the proposed Arroyo Seco dam project — but not as extensively as the first three alternatives.

"Will that prohibit it (Arroyo Seco dam) from going on the ballot with the other projects?" asked director Peters.

"You can not confine the discussion of environmental impacts to political boundaries," Henson said. "We have to have that environmental analysis. You can't propose the Carmel River dam and then at the last minute pull a switch on the people."

"Does that mean we would have to examine the proposed impacts of a San Felipe dam 100 miles from here?" Peters asked.

"Yes," Henson replied.

"That's absurd," Peters said.

District Counsel David Laredo said the proposed Arroyo Seco dam could be placed before voters before a full environmental impact report is prepared, and then submitted again after an EIR is completed in a "post-election."

"I can't accept the proposition that if this peninsula participates in the Arroyo Seco, we can abdicate our responsibility to determine what the impacts are on the Arroyo Seco," Henson said.

Manager Bruce Buel said considerably more study has been done on the proposed Carmel River dam than on the Arroyo Seco project, and "if you want an additional proposed project, it would require substantial new research and it would take longer to do the EIR."

IN OTHER BUSINESS, the board established boundaries for a proposed $150,000-per-year Carmel River management program to restore river vegetation and control erosion.

The project zone includes approximately 400 properties adjacent to the river; fees for riverfront property owners would be 35 cents per linear foot of river property.

If a property owner had a 200 foot parcel on both sides of the river, the annual charge would be $140, for example.

The proposal is to be submitted to voters in the zone in the November election unless more than 50 percent of the registered voters in the zone express opposition at protest hearing. The board has not set a date for the hearing.

Water use fees, which would be imposed on all water users in the district by the board without an election if the riverfront property owners approve of the zone, would finance about 70 percent of the program. For water users outside Carmel Valley, the surcharge would amount to about $2.42 per year, according to staff estimates.

Floodplain and watershed property owners — under the proposed financing mechanism — would pay 21 percent of program costs, divided by the acreage of their property. For example, a floodplain or watershed property owner with 10 acres would pay about $7.50 per year.

The board also authorized a study — financed by a $50,000 state grant — to determine whether water pumped from the Carmel Valley aquifer by California-American Water Co. is underflow, subject to regulation by the State Water Resources Control Board.

If that is found to be the case, the state could require that some portion of the water in the Carmel River water table be left intact for the preservation of fish and game habitats.

EROSION CONTROL along the Carmel River, through restoration of vegetation, is one of the primary objects of a $150,000 river management program. Property owners with land adjacent to the river — like those who suffered severe erosion damage just above the Schulte Road bridge last winter (above) — would pay 35 cents per linear foot of river frontage if the zone is approved by voters in November. (R.M. photo).

Massive media blitz planned to defeat the VOTE initiative

OPPONENTS of the VOTE (Vote on Tomorrow's Environment) initiative plan a massive advertising and direct-mail blitz to defeat the controversial planning measure in the Nov. 2 election.

A group which calls itself Citizens for the Future of Monterey County and which claims active participation of about 200, will begin a direct mail campaign this week to be followed by newspaper and radio advertisements, said Chairwoman Bonnie Robinson, a Salinas realtor.

The group hopes to raise $150,000 to finance its all-out campaign to defeat the initiative, Mrs. Robinson said. The committee has retained the services of a San Francisco public relations consultant — Donna Allen — to help it engineer its media campaign.

The VOTE initiative, which qualified for the ballot with the signatures of 7,071 registered Monterey County voters, would require local voter approval of master plans in nine areas before they are adopted by the board of supervisors.

The nine planning areas are North Monterey County, Greater Salinas, Greater Monterey County, Carmel Valley, Big Sur

Coast, Central Salinas Valley, Toro, Cachagua, and South Monterey County.

The board of supervisors voted Aug. 6 to place the measure on the November ballot, which allayed fears the initiative might not be voted on until after the 1980 Carmel Valley Master Plan is revised and readopted.

"We plan to do direct mail and outreach, as well as newspaper and radio advertising," Mrs. Robinson said. "We hope to raise at least $150,000 to defeat this initiative which we believe will shut down our county."

"Jobs and the people who live here will be hurt by it. If everything in planning and land use has to be voted on, we'll never get anything approved because I don't think the general public understands the process," Mrs. Robinson said.

"This is like putting the cart before the horse," she said. "This would confuse our whole planning process. I see no reason to take these decisions away from the people we elect."

The Citizens for the Future of Monterey County on letterhead stationery lists Bonnie Robinson as chairwoman and Nick Lombardo, owner of Rancho Canada in Carmel Valley, as finance chairman. Treasurer is Patrick Marchello, a Salinas accountant.

The Mayor's Report

Discussion between city and county proved helpful

By CHARLOTTE TOWNSEND

There was a good audience in Carmel City Hall when the board of supervisors, (except Michal Moore who was in Sacramento) met with the City Council, and I'd like to commend every person who took time to attend that important meeting. Since then I've been asked if the meeting came up to my expectations: "Was it worthwhile?"

"Were goals met?" To me, to see and talk face-to-face with these people who have such a great influence on our lives, our future, was certainly worthwhile. More than anything it was, hopefully, a beginning. In the past years the city of Carmel has acquired a reputation for belligerence and this certainly hasn't always furthered our affairs when dealing with people at the county level.

After this meeting, perhaps the supervisors will be left with the impression of a council which, although determined to "stick to its guns" whenever necessary, is also ready to communicate and cooperate whenever possible. If this meeting could be the start of a "new era" of communicating and of working together toward common goals, the benefits to every citizen are obvious.

Dusan Petrovic, supervisor from King City, expressed his thought in his column in the King City newspaper and in a gracious letter to me. Also let's remember that it was Marc Del Piero, chairman of the board of supervisors, who took the initiative for the combined meeting and he is certainly to be commended for this.

As usual the Bach Festival seemed to come and go all too quickly. In my house the silence seems very strange now that the young musicians and their friends have gone. How the general excellence is not only maintained but exceeded in each successive year is a marvel. The excellence is due to many, many people who work very hard at a multitude of tasks. I think special effort and care were taken to mark this 45th season. The results were grand and our village and every person involved should be very proud.

By now all of you should have received the questionnaire sent to request your comments and thoughts on the work being done by the General Plan Advisory Committee. I cannot urge you too strongly to not only mark your questionnaire but to check to see if your friends and neighbors have also done so. Imperfect as it may be, the questionnaire is a genuine effort to obtain input from each and every voter. So much depends on it. Please help your administrators accomplish what you want done. If you have any questions or I can be of any help, don't hesitate to call.

All my best,
Charlotte

Land trust, property owners' group draw battle lines over Big Sur plan

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE COAST Property Owners Association and the Big Sur Land Trust have clashed head-on over the controversial transfer of development credit scheme for the Big Sur coastal plan.

The CPOA, which claims membership of 250 Big Sur property owners, has accused the non-profit Big Sur Land Trust of secretly promoting the TDC plan as a means to acquire more land for conservation in Big Sur.

The Big Sur Land Trust, on the other hand, has vehemently denied the accusation and has demanded that the CPOA cease "misrepresentations" and "defamatory" statements about its involvement in land use in Big Sur.

The Monterey County Planning Commission has continued to Sept. 8 a public hearing on the transfer of development credit policy prepared by Fourth District Supervisor Michal Moore with Peter Bass of the Coastal Conservancy.

The commission wants to consider alternative methods to preserve prime coastal properties in Big Sur before it makes a recommendation on the TDC program to the board of supervisors.

Supervisor Moore's proposal would permit land owners with property in areas zoned for very low density to sell, or transfer, development rights for use on other parcels (receiving sites) where higher development density is permitted in the coastal plan.

The Coast Property Owners Association, in "An Open Letter to the Big Sur Land Trust" dated July 18, accused the land trust of involvement in the development and implementation of a TDC system before it was publicly known whether there would be such a mechanism in the Big Sur Local Coastal Program.

'We have not had any part in the forming of the TDC program,' Newell said. 'It's unfortunate that the CPOA board insists that this is the case. This seems to arise from a total suspicion of all forms and levels of government; there are others in Big Sur who don't agree with that.'

The CPOA stated in its letter that the Coastal Conservancy staff recommended on March 11 — more than one month before the release of the Moore/Bass TDC draft — that "the (Coastal) Conservancy grant $10,000 to the Big Sur Land Trust for the purpose of purchasing an option to buy a parcel of land on the Victorine Ranch."

"In this March 11 Conservancy recommendation, the Conservancy staff reported that in their November meeting, the Conservancy directed its staff to pursue 'specific option agreements to purchase properties along the Big Sur coast that would be appropriate transfer of development credit receiver sites.'" this statement, attributed to the same March 11 Coastal Conservancy recommendation:

"The Conservancy has benefitted greatly from a close working relationship with the Big Sur Land Trust. The trust is better situated to option the purchase of this property below fair market value than the Conservancy. In this case, the purchase price is $90,000 below the 1982 sale price of an adjacent comparable parcel."

THE COAST Property Owners Association also mentioned an April, 1980 letter from Michael Fischer, executive director of the Coastal Commission, to Congressman Leon Panetta, which flatly states that Monterey County "is presently considering" a transfer of development credit system for Big Sur.

From this and other information contained in the letter, the CPOA concluded that the Big Sur Land Trust had been involved in "active cooperation" with the Coastal Conservancy to implement a TDC program.

The CPOA correspondence was in reply to a June 24 letter from the Big Sur Land Trust, signed by executive director Brian Steen, in which the CPOA was accused of misrepresentation of the land trust's goals and objectives.

"You are in error in stating or implying that the Big Sur Land Trust has participated or cooperated in the development of the TDC system," Steen wrote to the CPOA.

"Our first awareness of the content and provisions of the program came with the April 12 (1981) publication of A Proposed Big Sur Density Management Program prepared for the county of Monterey by Supervisor Michal Moore and Peter Bass of the State Coastal Conservancy.

"You are also in error by implying impropriety on the part of the land trust in land trust transactions. The land trust has no powers of eminent domain and can only work with willing sellers and buyers. Most importantly, the purpose of the Big Sur Land Trust is 'to preserve forever the incomparable beauty of Big Sur.'"

Steen said the Big Sur Land Trust attempts to fulfill its mission by working with land owners "in a confidential and professional manner," and cautioned that "any subsequent misrepresentations will be regarded as deliberate and defamatory."

Steen said the Big Sur Land Trust will respond to the July 18 CPOA letter in much the same manner, and with another denial that the land trust was involved with development of the TDC program.

Roger Newell, president of the board of directors of the 100-member Big Sur Land Trust, said the organization has not drafted a formal reply to the CPOA letter, but his observation is that it contains "some leaps in logic that allowed them to come to some certain conclusions when there is no real connection there."

NEWELL ALSO denied that the Big Sur Land Trust had any role in the formulation of the transfer of development credit system proposed for the Big Sur coastal plan.

"We have not had any part in the forming of the TDC program," Newell said. "It's unfortunate that the CPOA board insists that this is the case. This seems to arise from a total suspicion of all forms and levels of government; there are others in Big Sur who don't agree with that."

Particularly ironic, Newell said, is the fact that the same individuals who have fought attempts to provide government control and protection over land use in Big Sur now attack the Big Sur Land Trust — a private, non-profit organization.

"It's more and more obvious that the land trust is serving a valuable role on the coast," Newell said. "The CPOA doesn't seem to appreciate the private sector approach that the land trust represents. They assume other motivations behind the land trust that are not apparent; it's a private sector vehicle for land conservation that's an alternative to the government."

"There's a judgment being made here that requires a lot of inference," Newell said.

Barbara Daughters, secretary of the CPOA Board of Directors and signer of the July 18 letter to the Big Sur Land Trust, said about half of the organization's 250 members live outside California.

Voting memberships are limited to Big Sur property owners, however Big Sur residents who do not own property may be non-voting, associate members, she said. There are 10 associate members in CPOA, Mrs. Daughters said.

One of the concerns of the organization is that the Big Sur Land Trust, working with the Coastal Conservancy, might purchase properties designated as TDC receiver sites and retire development rights, thus prohibiting building in Big Sur, Mrs. Daughters said.

"There is land which would be designated as receiver sites which the land trust has already bid for," she said, in reference to the Victorine Ranch, which encompasses about 400 acres. The Coastal Conservancy has expressed a desire to purchase about 140 acres of the Victorine Ranch and to reassemble existing lots into buildable parcels.

"The land trust could acquire those receiver site parcels and prevent anyone from building," Mrs. Daughters said. "The more receiver sites they buy, then where can I

How the Big Sur Land Trust operates

WHAT IS the Big Sur Land Trust, and how does it operate?

The trust is a non-profit corporation organized in 1978 "to preserve open space and protect the rural way of life of the Big Sur coastal area," according to one of its brochures.

The organization is governed by a seven-member board of trustees, which is advised by experts in agriculture, forestry, law, environmental studies, public service and the arts.

These are some of the methods by which the Big Sur Land Trust advances its goal of land conservation:

- Donation of land and funds through a will or family trust, through which charitable tax deductions can be obtained. The land owner may pass the property on to heirs — often with limitations on development — and ultimate ownership goes to the land trust after the death of all presently-living family members.
- Deferred gifts of land through charitable remainder trusts, in which "highly-appreciated but low-yielding" assets are donated to the land trust in exchange for lifetime income paid by the land trust. This permits the donor to avoid capital gains taxes, reduce estate taxes, and receive income tax benefits.

- Charitable contributions of a portion of undeveloped land, with simultaneous tax benefits. The landowner may continue to live on and use the land and enjoy an improved tax situation through federal and state tax deductions and reduced state inheritance and federal estate taxes.

- Reserved life estates under which a land owner may donate property yet retain a life estate or lease it back from the land trust. The property can be passed on to heirs or left to other interests.

- Bargain sale with tax benefits. The property is sold to the land trust at less than fair market value, with the difference between the sale price and the market value eligible for a charitable donation which can offset capital gains on the sale.

- Option to purchase, in which the land trust acquires an option to purchase property for which funds are not immediately available for specific length of time; the trust then attempts to raise funds to complete the purchase.

- Donation or conveyance of income property to the land trust through bargain sale for tax savings.

- Conservation easement, donated in perpetuity to the land trust, provide tax benefits to property owners who intend to keep all or part of their land with all rights to use it in its undeveloped state. The easement gives the trust the power to prevent development or other injurious use of the land.

- Neighborhood preservation permits a group of property owners to join together to acquire a parcel of land. The property owners then donate the land or a conservation easement to the land trust and retain rights for themselves.

CONTROVERSY continues over land use in Big Sur, which provides striking contrasts between land and sea, as shown in this photo taken about 25 miles south of Carmel, near

Nepenthe restaurant. The Big Sur Land Trust has denied charges by the Coast Property Owners Association that it has been in-

transfer my TDCs? If the Big Sur Land Trust takes the Victorine Ranch, then that's one site that can't be used for development.

"There are limits on how many sites can be built upon. The CPOA wants more area for people to build their homes. But nobody knows how much land will actually be buildable under the TDC plan, and (Supervisor) Michal Moore isn't saying."

BRIAN STEEN, executive director of the Big Sur Land Trust, said the organization "has not taken a position on the TDC system because it would affect our ability to work with various agencies."

"We have had no involvement with TDCs," Steen told the Pine Cone/Outlook. "We enter each transaction on an individual basis. Our whole business is to assist land owners affected by planning mechanisms of the state and county to preserve open space on the coast in whatever way is appropriate."

"The Coast Property Owners Association is missing the target by pointing to the Big Sur Land Trust. They should talk to Monterey County and to the Coastal Conservancy."

Steen said the Big Sur Land Trust, since its formation in 1978, has completed 13 transactions which involve 4,285 acres in Big Sur. Five of these have been scenic conservation easements, and the remainder are fee title or deed restrictions.

In scenic conservation easements, the property owner gives up development rights but retain the right to live on the property; in exchange the owner receives favorable tax benefits. In fee title or deed restrictions, the property owner agrees to limit future development if the property is sold.

"The Big Sur Land Trust is not in an advocacy position with respect to the TDC program," Steen said. "All our transactions are with willing property owners. The CPOA has steadfastly opposed any sort of government intervention, and yet the very thing we're trying to do is work with private property owners to bring about land preservation."

"But there has been plenty of good accomplished in the public interest by government agencies through the years," Steen said. "There is no clear solution for all the properties in Big Sur. There will probably always be a mix of private, state and federal lands."

Carmel High cheerleaders plan fashion show Aug. 14

The Carmel High School cheerleaders will sponsor a fashion show at 11 a.m. Saturday, Aug. 14 at Holman's Town and Country in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center next to Monte Mart.

The girls and their mothers will model the latest in fall fashions. There will also be door prizes.

Admission to the show is a $2 donation. For more information, call Deidi Kramer at 624-1507.

The cheerleaders also successfully defended their spirit award trophy during the National Cheerleading Association camp held at Stanford University in Palo Alto July 25-29.

The Carmel girls were voted by the other 400 cheerleaders representing 63 squads as the team they would most want their own squad to be like. Carmel also received the award last year.

McNulty will take planning commission seat on Aug. 18

FRED McNULTY, a 31-year resident of Carmel, will take his seat as the newest member of the city planning commission Aug. 18. He replaces Pauline Taylor, who resigned for personal reasons.

McNulty, an architect with the office of Wallace Holm in Monterey, was appointed in June, but could not join the commission until August because of previous business commitments.

McNulty, 62, said he wants to serve on the commission because "I've never held an elected or appointed office before. I feel it is a responsibility. I feel it's about time I exercised some civic duty."

He joins the commission just a few months before it begins study of proposed revisions of the Carmel General Plan. Recommendations from the General Plan Advisory Committee are expected to be presented to the commission this fall.

McNulty believes there needs to be a balance between the tourist and resident-oriented businesses.

"My understanding is Carmel was founded on a residential character and we may have gotten away from that," he said. "In 1958 the consultant for the master plan said Carmel would become a tourist mecca if we didn't take some steps. It has become just that."

McNulty was a member of the citizen's committee assigned to revise the city master plan, now called a general plan.

"A fair limit is probably the most difficult balancing to be done," he said. "Yes, it is a problem. I don't have the answers now, I want to see what the general plan committee recommends first."

McNulty said the city should consider a jitney bus service of some kind to help alleviate the parking problems in Carmel. "Just getting here (downtown) I'm faced with that problem. Yes, it is a serious problem," he said.

McNulty favors better transportation as one solution to parking problems. He also believes that the resident sticker program is helpful. That program allows residents with the special permit to park in one-hour zones for two hours.

The Highway 1 congestion problem also brings traffic and parking problems downtown, he said. "It's very difficult to say whether good roads attract traffic or traffic attracts good roads. It's a chicken-and-egg situation."

McNulty believes that better public transportation would decrease traffic on Highway 1, and thus also on Carmel streets. "You get more people in fewer vehicles and you get less congestion," he said.

Housing is another element of the general plan that McNulty feels must be addressed.

"You ask any agency on the Monterey Peninsula what is the number one problem and most will say housing," he said. "The real problem is how to do it and pay for it. I would very much like to see low-cost rental and purchase units."

However, McNulty feels any city action to encourage low cost housing must be taken cautiously to avoid profiteering.

"How do we administer it to keep someone from turning over the property at a profit?" he said. "It's like everything else. There are no easy solutions."

McNulty added that he favors so-called second kitchens if they are regulated.

"How are you going to regulate them so that they don't just become second rentals instead of housing for the elderly or low income?" he asked.

McNulty has lived on the Monterey Peninsula for 34 years, 31 of those in Carmel. He came to the area from Princeton, N.J. He received his Bachelor of Arts and Masters of Fine Arts degrees from Princeton University.

McNulty and his wife, Sara, have a daughter, Piper, who teaches in the Santa Clara area.

Talks set for today

Federal mediator tries to settle hotel strike

LABOR AND management are to meet with a federal mediator today, Aug. 12, in an attempt to reach a settlement in the week-old strike against 22 Monterey Peninsula hotels and restaurants.

In the Carmel area, picket lines have been established in front of the Holiday Inn, Highlands Inn and The Lodge in Pebble Beach. Workers have also walked off their jobs at The Fish House on the Park, and The Butcher Shop.

Josie Guerrero, office manager at union strike headquarters, said the two sides will meet at 11 a.m. Aug. 12 with a federal mediator called in from Washington, D.C.

Asked if she expected something productive out of the session, she replied: "I really couldn't tell you."

Workers in the 4,500-member Local 483 of the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union walked off their jobs Aug. 5 after a series of meetings with the Monterey Peninsula Hotel and Restaurant Association failed to deliver a new pact.

The Monterey Peninsula Hotel and Restaurant Association represents 22 businesses, including those being struck in the Carmel area. Other sites that have been picketed include Casa Munras, Hilton, Monterey Holiday Inn, Hyatt Del Monte and The Outrigger.

Lucy Jacinto, captain of the picket line in front of Carmel Holiday Inn, said the strike is over salary increases and benefits.

Mrs. Jacinto, who is a senior inspector in the housekeeping division, said the union wants pay scales increased between 5 and 20 percent depending on the job.

"We just need more money and extra benefits. I can't support my children on what I earn now," she said. Mrs. Jacinto said she is paid $4.34 an hour for a 40-hour work week.

Pickets in front of the Holiday Inn managed to stop two tour buses from entering the grounds. The passengers were forced to unload at a nearby vacant lot and carry their own luggage to the rooms, she said.

Mrs. Jacinto pointed out that most maids at the hotel are paid $3.76 an hour.

Joseph Loud, a member of Royal Security Service, said the strike has been peaceful.

"This is about the quietest place here. They've been very co-operative. The only thing is they won't let any tourist buses in," he said.

After a series of around-the-clock negotiations failed, about 1,400 union members went out on strike at 6 a.m., Aug. 5. The previous three-year contract expired July 31.

Management personnel, non-union workers and union members who refused to go on strike have kept the hotels and restaurants open. In addition, the association has established an available work force of non-union employees through job advertisements in local newspapers.

The strike is the first major labor dispute to affect the Monterey Peninsula tourist industry in 30 years.

Ed Haber, president of Green Meadows Company, the parent organization for Quail Lodge, said his employees did not strike.

"We had everybody, 100 percent come to work. There's no problems here. We have no pickets and everybody's at work," he said. "We have had 107 applicants for jobs, but we're not hiring. That's shocking. It doesn't speak well for the economy."

Bud Allen, owner of La Playa, also said that all of his 80 employees have reported to work as scheduled.

Nick Lombardo, vice president and spokesman for the association, said it would be "pure conjecture" to predict the result of the Aug. 12 meeting.

"With this meeting scheduled, there won't be any further discussions by the association with the union until the results," Lombardo said.

Lombardo added that the strike has not presented any major problems for business members of the association. "I hate to say it isn't hurting us, but it isn't. We're (the hotel association) running at full occupancy," he said.

Council pressured for election on annexation

THE CARMEL City Council will be asked to reconsider a resolution to terminate annexation proceedings for Carmel Woods when it meets at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Aug. 17 in city hall.

Supporters of annexation convinced the council at its Aug. 3 session to delay action on the resolution on grounds some citizens had been misled when they signed petitions opposed to annexation.

The Monterey County Registrar of Voters has certified that 514 residents, or 52.8 percent of the 972 registered voters in the unincorporated Carmel Woods area, signed protest. Under state law, if 50 percent of more of the registered voters in an area proposed for annexation protest, the annexation is halted.

JUDGE William Burleigh, a resident of Carmel Woods, signed a letter mailed to residents this week in which those who favor annexation are asked whether they were told signing protest petitions would place the issue on the ballot.

But if between 25 to 50 percent of the registered voters protest, the issue must be decided by voters in an election. Annexation proponents hope to convince the council that some voters believed that — by signing the petition — they would place the annexation question on the ballot.

Letters were mailed to Carmel Woods residents, signed by Carmel Woods resident and Municipal Court Judge William Burleigh, which request those who were told they had to sign the protest petition in order to have an election, to sign an affidavit to be presented to the council Aug. 17.

Supporters of annexation hope to obtain at least 30 such affidavits to be presented to the city council in hopes the council will call for an election. Burleigh told the Pine Cone/Outlook.

"Did you sign a petition against annexation thinking that it would force a vote in November?" Burleigh's letter asks. "Well, the opposite has happened. More than 50 percent signed such a petition and there will be no election unless you let the conducting authority know what your true intent was."

The letter asks those who favor an election to fill out an enclosed card and return it. Burleigh explains:

"This is not an effort to change your mind if you truly oppose annexation. It is an effort and an opportunity for you to make it known that you signed the anti-annexation petition to ensure yourself of your right to vote on this complex matter. By returning the enclosed card, there may still be an election."

Monterey County Dist. Atty. William Curtis said he was contacted by one of the pro-annexation leaders and asked if the council could call an election — and not cancel annexation — if some citizens signed the petitions under the impression that would force the issue to the ballot.

"I told them it would be important to identify those people who had the wrong idea and to call that to the attention of the elections department. I also told them to get an attorney, but there has been nothing officially brought to my attention."

BETTY BLOOMER, assistant registrar of voters, said her department is required only to verify signatures and addresses of petition signers, to check signatures of petition circulators, and to report the certified results to the city council.

"Because of all the press coverage, in essence the persons who signed the petitions knew what they were signing," Mrs. Bloomer said. "In our research of the petitions, we found no irregularities."

Carmel City Atty. George Brehmer cautioned the city council at its Aug. 3 meeting against any consideration other than the number of valid signatures of registered voters on the protest petitions.

To do otherwise, the council would place itself in the role of the courts since "what was in the mind of the person who signed the petition is a judicial determination," Brehmer said.

Brehmer told the Pine Cone/Outlook Aug. 9 he is still convinced "the council should not decide whether someone who has protested was misled or not misled."

"LAFCO (The Local Agency Formation Commission) has no knowledge of city councils doing anything other than what's in the election code," Brehmer said. "The code says the council shall 'value' the written protest, which means to determine whether there are enough valid signatures to annex, call for an election, or cancel annexation. The council has done that."

In other business, the council is scheduled to:

- Hold a public hearing on an appeal of a planning commission decision to deny a use permit to allow Giorgio's restaurant to open in the space now occupied by Dock Lor's Canton Restaurant on the south side of Ocean Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets.

- Hold a public hearing on first reading of a permanent ordinance to replace the temporary moratorium which regulates the subdivision of commercial space into smaller spaces. The ordinance recommended by the planning commission would require a use permit for any subdivision of retail space, and would replace the moratorium which is to expire April 5, 1983.

- Award bids for a street sweeper and two trucks for the public works department, for which a total of $105,000 has been budgeted.

- Consider whether to define a policy on absences of commission members which would automatically vacate a position after whenever a certain number of meetings of that commission are unattended.

Carmel discusses but fails to create city recreation program for all ages

By MICHAEL GARDNER

CARMEL HAS a thriving cultural center, an excellent but cramped public library, valuable downtown park properties, and the services of well-financed forestry and police departments.

But it has no recreation program for its citizens, although the idea has been discussed — fruitlessly — for years. The city will once again resume discussion of this long-dormant issue "probably later this year," in the words of City Administrator Douglas Peterson.

It's an idea that many people acknowledge has merit, but the question remains: Is it an idea whose time has come?

"We've talked about it in the past — providing some kind of recreation program for all ages," Peterson said. "There's nothing active on this right now. The city will talk about it; it's an annual event. Probably later this year."

Even if the council does place the issue on its agenda, there is no guarantee that immediate steps will be taken to implement such a program.

"It would be presumptuous if we were to think we could snap our fingers and start a recreation program overnight," Peterson said.

The city may not be able to start a program "overnight," but there have been moves toward a comprehensive project of some kind in the past.

More than five years ago, at the urging of former Mayor Barney Laiolo, a recreation facility committee was established to investigate the feasibility of a city-wide program.

The committee formulated a plan to build a two-story multi-use facility on the Sunset Center property north of 10th Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets.

The proposed facility included plans for a gym, swimming pool, multi-use room, lockers and shower areas, handball and racquetball courts and a weight room.

Robert Stephenson, now a councilman and then a member of the recreation committee, told the General Plan Advisory Committee last spring: "I think it would be great. I would be happy if the city could afford to build it and maintain it."

RICHARD TYLER, director of Sunset Center and chairman of the now-defunct committee, supported the concept also.

"The efforts and facilities through Sunset Center are only able to accommodate small segments of our community," Tyler said in a memo to the council. "It is evident that this leaves a large group in various ages without an appropriate location to pursue their interests and physical needs.

"It is generally accepted that a physical gram is important for the overall well-being of an individual. Our intention is to develop a facility offering the opportunity to all ages, particularly the adult or older population who are usually not included in the developmental plans of recreational facilities."

Following the committee's investigation, the city sponsored a survey of Carmel residents that asked whether they favored a recreation facility.

A slight majority of 337 to 304 respondents favored construction of the facility. Of those in favor, 327 favored a swimming pool and said they would use it.

However, because of the close results and costs, the city council vetoed the plan. The committee was also scrapped.

In mid-1981, Sunset Center began to expand its activities. The weight room equipment was removed and donated to Carmel

Because Carmel does not have an organized recreation program, many residents travel to Pacific Grove or Monterey for classes, swimming and sports leagues.

High School as long as times were set aside for use by residents, under an agreement between the council and school trustees.

Tyler said the main recreational facility at Sunset Center at present is the gym, which is used 12 hours a day, Monday through Friday, and six hours on Saturday. Programs offered in the gym include martial arts instruction and dance exercise classes.

Since Sunset Center is fully utilized and Carmel Foundation activities are generally reserved for senior citizens, a future recreation program would probably have to be coordinated with the Carmel Unified School District.

Because Carmel does not have an organized recreation program, many residents travel to Pacific Grove or Monterey for classes, swimming and sports leagues.

"We do have good participation because there aren't any organized programs in Carmel, Monterey Recreation Superintendent Kay Russo said. "I would say at least 20 to 30 percent of our participants are from Carmel."

This summer, Monterey offered 130 different recreation programs that ranged from swimming to dance to arts and crafts. Many Carmel residents were unable to participate because priority is given to Monterey residents and some classes are full, she said.

Monterey Sports Supervisor Ben Omoto said two of the soccer teams are from Carmel. He estimated that about 5 percent of the adults in the sports leagues live in Carmel.

In Pacific Grove, recreation Director John Miller said that about 5 percent of the participants live in Carmel. Miller said there are three teams from Carmel that play in the adult slo-pitch softball league.

Dan Yurkovich, a former member of the recreation facility committee and community services director for the school district, is in favor of a program.

"I think we ought to do more things and a joint venture, particularly for the older people, is necessary," Yurkovich said. "There is nothing to do for the older people."

There are a variety of programs that could be offered, including slo-pitch softball teams, swimming for all ages, basketball leagues, dance classes, and arts and crafts, he said.

"Between the city and the school, we could have a fantastic program. I think it has possibilities in Carmel," Yurkovich said.

POLICE officials also agree that a program would help them in their work with Carmel youth.

"From my personal experience, I can say any kind of program is very helpful in providing an outlet for the kids in the summer months, especially," Police Chief John McGilvray said.

Asked if an active recreation program would reduce crimes normally attributed to area youth such as vandalism, McGilvray said: "It would depend on the program. There are a lot of variables. I've seen some areas with big problems with vandalism where it helps alleviate problems and other areas where it did not do any good."

McGilvray pointed out that the key to a successful recreation program is to get the people to participate. "You've got to get them interested. Somebody's got to get them to come out and participate. If you can't get to the kids, the program falls flat," he said.

"Anything you can do to vent the energies and frustrations of the kids in a positive way helps. The younger you can get to them the better," agreed former Police Chief Bill Ellis.

Ellis used to head the now-disbanded Police Youth Athletic Association program, which provided youth activities in the gym at Sunset Center.

The association rented the gym for $1 per year.

JERRY PULLEN, a Carmel police sergeant and president of the Carmel Youth Baseball Board of Directors, believes the city should offer some kind of organized recreation program for all ages. He is active in youth baseball as evidenced by this photo taken in this year's season of play.

"We had the recreation program since 1971 at the gym. The school district and the city discussed a combination program of basketball and weightlifting," he said. "Because of the pressures for more use of the gym, the city decided to move the weightlifting program up to the high school."

Ellis blamed the death of the proposed recreation facility on finances. He added that the city should continue to discuss a program with the school district, but he wasn't optimistic.

"It comes up every few months or a year and then it just falls by the roadside," Ellis said.

Police Officer Gerald Pullen is concerned about activities for Carmel youth from a professional and personal viewpoint. Pullen is president of the Carmel Youth Baseball Board of Directors, coaches a team and has two children who play baseball.

"As an individual police officer, I know the youth baseball program is already working with the kids," Pullen said. "It brings me closer to the kids. They understand more about the role of a police officer in the community. It (a program) would help alleviate fears of the police officer. It helps them understand that the TV go-get'em macho cop just isn't the case."

The Carmel Youth Baseball program is coordinated by the Carmel Safety Employees Association (police and fire employees). Several association members are coaches. Local merchants sponsor the squads with the purchase of uniforms and equipment.

This summer, 377 boys and girls ages 7 to 16 participated in the program, which finished earlier this month.

TO RAISE money, the association staffs an annual challenge softball contest against the Foxtails, a team of Monterey Peninsula women players. The contest this year is at the end of August.

Despite the fundraiser and the time and energy donated by the association, Pullen believes that an injection of city funds for a program would help immensely.

"The idea of a city-wide recreation program is great. The city has never really ventured out with something like that before," Pullen said. "Funding the program is going to be the problem. The city has not contributed to Carmel Youth Baseball. They don't maintain the field or help at all."

The Youth Baseball field is part of the Carmel Mission property. Church officials allow the field to be used free in return for maintenance.

Pullen believes there is widespread community support for a recreation program that would include activities for all ages.

"I don't see any problem in getting a good number of people involved, especially if you include the county," he said.

Pullen said a joint program could be successful if operated through the schools and the city. He believes a recreation director would have to be hired.

At the Carmel Foundation, which provides numerous services to senior citizens, there is a wide variety of activities offered that includes dancing, arts and crafts, and photography.

But one thing the city needs is a swimming pool, even though the facility at the high school is open sporadically for recreation use, Carmel Foundation Executive Director Betty B. Plank said.

Mrs. Plank said the survey of the former facility committee indicated there is a demand for a pool. "We've got people who would take advantage of it. People can exercise more in the water. It's therapy for the arthritics."

The city has had a long-standing policy of not actively seeking federal or state funds for such projects, but Mrs. Plank believes this precedent should be broken.

"I know the city wants to go its own way and pay its own way. It seems to me that you could bend and break the rules once for the people," she said. "I don't like leaning on the federal government but there is a time you could make an exception. Of course now, we may have waited too long."

MRS. PLANK pointed out that Seaside has an "excellent" program for senior swimmers, but there is not adequate transportation for Carmel residents to take advantage of that federally financed facility.

"So much of the recreation program hinges on transportation. Many of these people can't drive or don't have a car. It takes two hours to get to the Seaside pool by bus with the transfers," Mrs. Plank said.

Mrs. Plank believes the city should revitalize the recreation committee and make a new commitment to a program for all ages.

"I thought the committee was a good idea. I'm sorry it's not continuing," she said. "The city is the one making all of the money. I think they should just re-arrange the priorities."

City Finance Director James Bajari said the council has not budgeted funds for recreation in the 1982-83 budget. He added that there is a $500,000 beginning balance carried over from 1981-82.

Bajari pointed out that beginning balance funds have been historically spent on capital outlay projects.

Former Mayor Barney Laiolo and current Mayor Charlotte Townsend differ on the importance of a city-wide recreation program.

Laiolo was the organizer of the facility committee five years ago.

"The idea was to utilize the existing facilities as much as we could do," Laiolo said. "It kind of took a back seat. I still think it's a very worthwhile thing. I still think the combined efforts of the school system and the city to use existing buildings is workable."

"I think the city has an obligation to commit themselves to some kind of recreation program. I think it has merit that should be followed."

Mrs. Townsend said she is hesitant to endorse a recreation program: "I will have to study it and see what was proposed in the past. I feel that we are so blessed with so many natural resources; where we live is so rich for things to do. I can't think of any other place where there are so many things to do."

"I'm always surprised when people need directed activities. Parents and children with any initiative can find a lot to do."

Jack Giles, director of the Carmel Youth Center on Fourth and Junipero avenues, said he "favors any kind of recreation program." However, the Youth Center does not want to become involved with the city.

"We just stay out of it. We do our thing and pay our bills," Giles said.

The Youth Center provides a wide variety of activities for youngsters in junior high school grades and up.

The facility is open from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. daily. There are a big-screen television, games, pool tables, ping pong tables and snack bar area.

Officials with the center also organize trips to recreation areas like Laguna Seca, roller skating rinks, bowling alleys and swimming pools.

The majority of the Youth Center budget is raised through the operation of the nine Bing mobiles, which are mobile snack bars. The center either operates or rents the large vans for use at major events like the Laguna Seca races, high school football games and golf tournaments in Pebble Beach.

Oak moth larvae hatch during summer months

GREGORY D'AMBROSIO
CARMEL CITY FORESTER

The second cycle of the oak moth larvae is beginning to hatch from the egg masses deposited by the moths from the first cycle in June. Worms on some trees are approximately 1/8" to 1/4" long; on other trees there are very few or none at all.

Unhatched egg masses are still in evidence in the upper branch area of many of the oaks that I have been monitoring for the past several weeks. If temperatures increase and we happen to be blessed with a few sunny days, those remaining egg masses should begin hatching.

I would advise home owners to be aware and monitor their trees closely. Trees that have been defoliated once before should be sprayed and fertilized to protect them. Trees that were not defoliated will not need this special attention.

Remember, the oak moth larvae has been a part of the oaks life cycle for thousands of years and this natural chain of events, in most cases, is not a life threatening problem for your trees.

Carmel school district may raise lunch prices

By MICHAEL R. GARDNER

CARMEL UNIFIED School District cafeteria lunch prices are expected to be raised at least a quarter this fall to offset increased costs.

Business Manager Robert Zampatti will report on the status of the 1982-83 budget and the need for a hike in lunch prices when the board of education meets at 7:30 p.m.

Tuesday, Aug. 17 in Room 2 at Carmel High School.

Zampatti plans to meet with cafeteria Supervisor Dolores Getz before the meeting to develop a specific proposal for lunch price increases.

"We're going to recommend that the prices go up because we just about broke even last year," Zampatti said.

Zampatti blamed the proposed increase on inflation and the failure of the federal government to increase its subsidies for school lunch programs. Carmel received $26,600 from the federal government in federal meal subsidies in 1981-82.

The cafeteria is one of the programs required to "pay its own way" under a policy established by the board of education. In fiscal year 1980-81, the cafeteria had an operating deficit of about $37,000.

To prevent a deficit in the $194,000 cafeteria budget for 1981-82, trustees authorized a 25 cent price increase in lunches and a nickel hike in the cost of milk last year.

Despite the gloomy news in the cafeteria program, the overall district budget picture is much brighter these days, Zampatti said.

With the lease of Woods School for nearly $100,000 and additional state legislation that increased funding to local districts, Carmel trustees will have approximately $310,000 as a beginning balance for the 1982-83 fiscal year.

The $310,000 is more than triple the $71,000 beginning balance listed in the tentative budget, which was passed in June.

relative to negotiations is another matter," he said. "We base our entire budget on one-time monies. It will come home to haunt us."

The $300,000 beginning balance is still not enough to maintain a reserve plus match staff contract proposals for an approximately 14 percent pay increase.

Without a reserve, the $300,000 would barely cover a 6 percent across-the-board staff pay increase. Supt. William Rand has estimated that each 1 percent salary increase costs the district about $50,000.

In addition, the board had previously expressed a need for a reserve fund to cover unanticipated expenditures. Districts generally try to keep at least $100,000 in reserves.

Even after the state budget was signed into law, Carmel school administrators predicted that local funds would not increase significantly.

But several changes in state legislation provided increased subventions for Carmel, including an additional $11.88 per ADA (Average Daily Attendance). The bulk of school financing is provided through state formulas based on the ADA.

In addition, Carmel will receive about $23,000 from the state because of changes in special education program funding formulas. The state requires school districts to provide special education classes for physically and mentally handicapped students. The program is funded through state grants and funds from local school districts.

Changes in state funding of the regional occupation program and driver's training also increased the Carmel school budget by about $17,000.

Another $8,000 not originally included in the tentative budget will be raised through local sources. The money is mostly garnered from the rent of classrooms to outside organizations, Zampatti said.

Changes in personnel also saved the district about $23,000. The changes occurred through attrition and the hiring of employees on a lower pay scale.

Carmel Valley Community Center offers host of swimming courses

The Carmel Valley Community Center Pool, located on Ford Road behind the Community Center, is in the midst of its summer program.

The pool underwent approximately $40,000 worth of renovation last winter to the filter, heating, chemical and lighting systems.

Courses offered are:

Parent/Tot (nine months-three yrs): This course is designed to teach the parent how to have fun with their child in the water while teaching them how to become water safe.

Polywogs (three-five years): The objective of this course is to teach young non-swimmers some basic skills in the water such as going under water, floating and gliding.

Beginners (Five years and up): This course is designed to teach individuals basic water skills such as front and back float and glide as well as beginning crawl and back strokes.

Advanced Beginner: This course continues to develop skills learned in the beginner courses as well as introducing the elementary back stroke, diving, and basic survival and water rescue skills.

Intermediate Swimmer, and Advanced Swimmer: Once the student is at this level they are encouraged to start in the swimmer competitive techniques courses offered. These courses are designed to develop the swimmers ability in the four competitive strokes of freestyle (crawl), butterfly, backstroke and breaststroke.

Diving: A beginning and intermediate diving course is offered. This course teaches and develops basic diving skills off the one meter board.

Classes run from 9 a.m. to 12 noon with four 45-minute time periods to choose from. The third and final three-week session began July 26.

Other programs offered throughout the summer are:

Recreation Swim runs Monday through Friday, 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.; Saturday 12 p.m.-4 p.m. and Sunday 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Lifeguards are on duty during this time.

Barracuda Swim Team is an age group competitive swim team for children from five to 18 years of age. Workout times are from 4 to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Masters/Adult Swimming allows adults from 18 to 90 years to get their exercise by swimming. Workout times run from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. on Monday-Friday and 10 a.m.-12 noon on Saturday.

Advanced Lifesaving Classes began this week for ages 14 and up (14-17 will receive their basic lifesaving). This course is designed to instruct in all areas of water safety and rescue.

Private Lessons will be available to anyone beginning Aug. 16 by arrangement with the manager.

Private Parties who want to use the pool on certain evenings can do so by arrangement with the manager.

For any information and to sign up for any program, call the pool at 659-2606 or just come to the pool.

Kiwanis rummage sale

The Carmel-by-the-Sea Kiwanis Club will hold its annual rummage sale starting at 9 a.m., Saturday, Aug. 14 at the Carmel High School gymnasium. Proceeds will benefit the scholarship fund. The public is invited.

Markers to be installed

Blue reflective markers will be installed throughout the unincorporated areas of Carmel and Pebble Beach to help firefighters locate fire hydrants at night.

Firefighters from County Service Areas 42 and 43 are installing the reflectors in the center of roads. The reflectors indicate that a fire hydrant is nearby.

BECAUSE OF the additional monies, Zampatti predicted that the trustees will not have to make the originally-expected program cuts. By state law, a district must have a balanced final budget approved by early September.

But Zampatti also cautioned that the district cannot be over-confident that the budget problems are over.

"It means our budget is in significantly better shape, but we're still not in great shape," Zampatti said. "A couple of things are negatives. The lease of Woods School is marvelous, but that is only for one year. Other state money is also a one year situation."

Zampatti said trustees must plan for an increasingly tight fiscal future, beginning with the current contract negotiations with staff.

"(We'll recommend) that we adopt the budget based on the figures. What we do

fall housing

The International Student Office at Monterey Peninsula College is in need of housing of all types for new international students arriving during August to start the fall semester.

Students come to MPC from around the world because of the college's reputation and that of the American school system in general.

Requirements for international students are stringent and well-enforced. The students have F-1 student visas, which means that they must be responsible for financing themselves and must pay substantial out-of-state tuition fees.

They expect to pay current rental rates, usually between $200-$400 per month, for accommodations.

Interested persons should contact Elenore Souza, Housing Coordinator for the International Student Office, 9 a.m.-1 p.m. weekdays at 646-4259.

Studio Theatre is up for sale

By FLORENCE MASON

The "ever-whirling wheel of change"...

ON DOLORES STREET

The news is that the Studio Theatre/Restaurant is for sale. That means major changes for the Curtis family and a major question: when a new owner appears on the scene, will there still be a theater restaurant on Dolores Street between Ocean and Seventh Avenues?

The owner/manager/sometime actress (Connie Curtis), the director and frequent actress (Marina Curtis), the historian actor (Robert Tidwell) and the chef (Randy Curtis), all have new plans for their lives.

Connie will move to Coronado where she will "just play." I believe that — if you put a time limit on it. Creative Connie taught emotionally disturbed children for 12 years and found that one of the best ways to reach them was through art, music and dance. She then turned her artistic abilities to designing sets and moved from that into ownership of her own business — the Studio. She, like the other members of the family, has worked unceasingly for the past four years, so a vacation is certainly in order. To what will Connie Curtis devote her many talents next?

Marina Curtis — daughter of Connie, wife of Robert Tidwell, sister of Randy — will return to school in San Diego. The family shares an interest in film — past and present — and Marina's ultimate goal is to direct in that medium. That's another change, as her experience has been in legitimate theater.

She trained at the Weber-Douglas Academy in London and was acting with the Bedini Theater Group in San Francisco when her mother's desire to involve her in the Studio Theatre proved irresistible.

Robert Tidwell will return to his first academic love — history. He plans to complete the requirements for a degree in that subject; with only nine units to go, that's a relatively short-term goal.

Randolph Curtis and his immediate family want to stay in this area. He will be most interested in whatever plans a new owner may have for the business and in the back of his mind is the possibility of opening his own small business here. Comic books, Randy?

In a sense, the rest of the family's return to the San Diego area is going home; they lived in Southern California for many years. The proximity to the center of the film industry suits Marina's plans very well.

Connie Curtis estimates that during the four years she has owned the business and produced its plays, the audiences have been about equally divided between local residents and tourists.

"We have people who come to every play we produce and others who come from all over the country, from Europe and other foreign places whom we may only have with us for one visit," she said. The theater has featured lighter forms of entertainment suitable for a dinner theater.

In addition to the Dolores Street facility, the family rents a warehouse under the Golden Bough Theater, where rehearsals take place, costumes are stored and sets are constructed. Practically a member of the family, Jim Webber constructed most of the sets on which he displayed his considerable acting talents.

The theater has been a place of opportunity for many local actors whom it has welcomed and in many cases, trained, including the grateful and now very sad writer of this column.

The actors, like most who appear on Peninsula stages, are not paid. In cash, that is. One who was asked if she didn't feel "exploited" by this arrangement, said: "No, I don't. I choose to do it. I love being on stage. It fulfills me in some way that nothing else does. And I am paid — in pleasure, friendship, the satisfaction of a job well done with a congenial team, and in invaluable experience."

Anyone interested in buying the business or inquiring about it should contact Connie Curtis directly. The theater is going ahead with its fall schedule, as planned: currently, The Seven-Year Itch; The Owl and the Pussycat (which opens Aug. 27); Sleuth (from Oct. 8); Finishing Touches (Nov. 17) — unless and until a new owner takes center stage

ON OCEAN AVENUE

There are new owners for Ocean Avenue Realty. Friends of long-time owner Leo Tanous will be glad to know that he'll stay on as a specialist in commercial real estate and ranches. Yvonne Campbell, one of the firm's new owners, put it warmly: "Leo Tanous will remain the guiding hand at Ocean Avenue Realty."

Speaking for herself and co-owner Maria Wahl, Yvonne Campbell said that they have "a lot of optimism" for the real estate market on the Monterey Peninsula. "It's the best market coming up that we've seen for a long time," she added. "The change in financing will eventually be good for everyone."

This has already been a momentous year for Mrs. Campbell. She took over as manager of Ocean Avenue Realty in February. In July, she was accepted as a member of the International Federation of Realtors, which has members from 44 countries.

And now this native of France is a partner in the well-known Carmel firm. It is not her first experience as an entrepreneur, however; she owned and operated a beauty salon in Carmel for 14 years. Real estate has been her business life since 1969.

Another significant event in the lives of Yvonne Campbell and her husband, Bob Roberts, occurred just a few days ago, when their son was married in San Jose.

Maria Wahl is a native of California and has been a Carmel resident for 10 years, eight of those in real estate. Her special interest is the exchange and trade of properties. She is a member of the Society of Financial Consultants and has sponsored seminars in that field. She, too, is married. She and her husband, Robert, a marketing consultant, have an 18-year-old daughter.

MEANWHILE, BACK ON DOLORES...

Another change! This one after only a few months. Scandinavian Imports — just a couple of doors from the Studio Theatre — will close down and a bit of England will come in. The new business at that location? The "Dance Centre."

The name doesn't reveal exactly what will be sold by co-owners Jan Durney and Suzanne Lehr. It's a line of English sportswear and dancewear, along with related accessories, for both men and women.

The clothes are made in London, sportswear having been added to the original line of dancewear. That includes leg warmers, tights, leotards and tops, pants and skirts. Jan Durney sent a brochure showing examples of the clothes around the table so that the cautious members of the Business License and Code Review Board could see them at their last meeting. Not a T-shirt among them!

What was particularly noted by board members was the unusual range of colors — 28 in all — some of them not at all common in apparel.

Mrs. Durney, who describes herself as having a second "go-around" in Carmel (with an eight-year hiatus in Marin County in between) said she first saw this line of clothes in a Scottsdale, Ariz. store while visiting her mother there. She was so impressed by the beauty of the shop as well as by the clothes that she explored further and "one thing led to another."

"The company has 12 stores in this country now, and nine in other countries, none anywhere in northern California except ours," she said.

She met Suzanne Lehr here about four years ago. Jan and her husband, Michael, have a daughter, 11, as do the Lehrs. Another daughter, 20, and an 18-year-old son complete the Durney family. "This is home," Mrs. Durney said. "It always has been." Her interests — outside of the exciting new business — reflect this. "I enjoy cooking, gardening, tennis and of course all our family activities," she said.

Suzanne Lehr is a psychologist who was looking for something totally different and found it. To make sure of the line's quality, she and Mrs. Durney not only went to Los Angeles and Palm Springs to see Dance Centre stores there, but subjected the 100 percent cotton garments to several washings and wearings. "Everything held up," Mrs. Lehr said. She also talked to a friend who had lived in London and knew Dance Centre clothes, which she called "a spectacular line."

To Mrs. Lehr this sportswear is just what the Monterey Peninsula needs. "It's useful and practical; just throw it on and get going!"

Mrs. Lehr, who taught psychology for several years, is no longer active in that field. She and her husband, Jeffrey, a physician with offices in Monterey and Salinas, have four children, so the home front is a very busy one. Their youngest is Ryan, 1 1/2; Vanessa is 5; Alexandra 11 and Elisa 13.

A MOVE IS A CHANGE, TOO

Bennett Sculpture is responsible for a cheerful business note today. Twin brothers Tom and Bob Bennett have just moved their gallery into new and larger quarters at the Plaza. "Yes, it's going very well here," manager Carol Cannon said.

The Bennetts, who live near the company's foundry in Sacramento, opened their Carmel gallery just two years ago. The new space — upstairs and across the bridge — is twice as large. There are four other outlets and a new one just coming up in Scottsdale, Ariz. Carol Cannon said they may soon have their own gallery in Hawaii, too. The brothers have been showing their contemporary bronze sculptures there for some time.

Another change in the past two years is that the Bennetts have a new foundry which is large enough to encourage the making of large architectural pieces. It is very much a family enterprise since the Bennetts' mother, wives, in-laws and even cousins are all involved.

A CARMELITE IN HUNGARY

What is Vizsla? Ask May Carpenter!

She'll tell you that a Vizsla is a Hungarian pointer, whose smooth golden rust-colored coat is much admired. The vizsla is one of four Hungarian breeds to be featured in an International Dog Show in Budapest this month. May Carpenter, owner of "Total Dog" in The Barnyard, is in Budapest right now, having been invited to judge Vizsla at this important show.

Before she left for Europe last week, Mrs. Carpenter told me that she and her late husband became interested in Vizslas during the early 1950s. It was a new breed then and the Carpenters first saw one through the friend of a friend.

"We saw him and had to have one!" is how Mrs. Carpenter remembers it. Eventually, they had the pick of the first American litter of Vizslas, and that was only the beginning.

MAY CARPENTER, owner of Total Dog in The Barnyard, is in Budapest, Hungary to judge a prestigious dog show.

Mr. Carpenter hunted with the dogs they bred and Mrs. Carpenter showed them. There have been several generations of top winning and producing dogs since.

Don't look for any kennels at her Rancho Rio Vista home, however. All the current Vizslas have the run of the house.

Mrs. Carpenter was understandably excited about her trip, and reported that she would be away for a month. "It's not only a dog show," she said, "there's also a dog tour and a photography contest." She remembers one photograph of a Vizsla running on Carmel Beach that was in the Pine Cone several years ago, and said she would be delighted to find a copy of that picture to enter into the contest.

While she is away, Top Dog will continue to operate, selling "everything for and about dogs." Not just Vizslas, either.

A BUSY MAN WILL BE BUSIER

Lackey's of Carmel, a comprehensive alcoholism service, has a new medical director. And young Dr. John Frank Bennetts has taken on another new challenge.

For Dr. Bennetts it's a year of new challenges, as he opened a family practice in the Valley last January. He'll keep on with that practice, devoting only part of his time to the medical care of Lackey's patients.

He and his wife, Nancy, who were married at Carmel Mission, moved here in 1977 when Dr. Bennetts started a residency in family practice at Natividad Medical Center. After completing that residency he stayed on in a teaching position. He is also a clinical instructor at U.C. San Francisco.

Why has this busy physician taken on a new responsibility? "I have been wanting to do more by way of community effort," he added that he also saw it as a fine opportunity to learn more about alcoholism and its effects on the community as well as on families. "Mr. Lackey really does the program there," he explained, "I'll just be dealing with the patients' other medical problems."

Dr. and Mrs. Bennetts have a young son, Brett, whose dad is a runner and can sometimes be found playing volleyball on the beach.

"SCARED AND EXCITED"

That's how Rod Kenyon describes his feelings as he starts up a new business of his own. He's been selling firewood and doing landscaping for some time, but now he is putting together a wood lot and landscape supply business in Carmel Valley Village. "It's a first for me," he said, "the first time I've had a place where the public comes to me." The public can find various kinds of firewood and such things as railroad ties, rocks and bark in the new business "behind the deli."

Kenyon has lived in this area all his life. He graduated from Carmel High in 1972. He and his wife, Roberta, live in Cachagua. Mrs. Kenyon works part-time in the Chatterbox restaurant, also in the Village, and spends the rest of the time with the couple's two children — Sandra, five and Paul, three.

It may be a little harder now for Kenyon to indulge his favorite hobbies: skiing (he used to be a ski instructor in Washington) and riding and racing motorcycles.

CARMEL HIGH CLASS OF 1952 HOLDS REUNION

The Carmel High School Class of 1952 re-lived the good old days during its 30th reunion over the weekend of July 31. The weekend was sponsored by Janet (McFail) Childs, Allene (Knight) Fremier and Del Meyer.

The classmates met Friday at the Carmel Youth Center where director Jack Childs surprised everyone with old student body cards. The Youth Center was also the meeting place of a second party between 10 a.m. and noon Saturday, July 31.

The big event of the evening was a dinner at La Playa Hotel, where the class picture was displayed and many memories were recalled. Displays of other photographs during days at Sunset School were also viewed.

The highlight of the evening was a surprise by former Carmel Superintendent of Schools Stuart Mitchell. Mitchell showed a film taken during the years 1947-49 of student life such as class work, football games, track meets, lunch at the cafeteria and swimming.

Among those who attended the reunion were: Fritz Abplanalp, Robert Updike, Kim (McCrae) Sinclair, Jo (Albee) Smart, Said Meheen, Janet (McFail) Childs, Allene (Knight) Fremier, Beverly (Wood) Freeman, Janet (Huffman) Shaw, Walt Shaw, Jim Thompson, Stewart Emery, Kurt Von Meir, Sally (Holt) Jett, Julia (Graves) Beard, Allene (Petty) Payton, Bob Campbell, Skip Lloyd, Gilbert Neil, Mansfield Turney, Del Meyer, Chip Buerger, June (Lowrey) Weisser, Peter Hatton, Marcia (Danelz) Lyon, Barry Hammer, Diana (Horne) Waite,

The course included writing, editing and broadcasting at Northwestern. The program ended August 7. The instructors were Northwestern professors and working journalist. Karen is the daughter of the Robert L. Armsteads of Carmel.

JANET CHILDS, who helped arrange the reunion, enjoyed a laugh with Robert Updike.

SKIP LLOYD resumed a familiar pose — he was the class president in 1952.

Petpourri

*A barking dog
is an unhappy dog*

By JUDITH A. EISNER

"WE OUGHT TO LICENSE people instead of dogs," snarled a disgruntled local homeowner recently. "That way, we could control who could and could not own dogs."

This peeved party is finding his patience more and more severely tried by neighboring dogs howling early in the morning while he's trying to get his wits together over breakfast coffee. What really grates him is that the dog owners apparently make no effort to curb their pets' howls.

Probably the only creature that appreciates the endless barking of a dog is another dog, who, out of sympathy, may join in and make it a duo. We don't quite understand how thoughtless pet owners can go about their business while Fido is roaring away out back. Maybe after a while they just stop listening.

There are, of course, perfectly legitimate reasons for a dog to bark. In the first place, barking is a dog's form of communication. He barks to alert his master to danger or to announce the presence of a stranger. He may respond to the wail of a police or ambulance siren by howling — because the pitch of the siren hurts his ears.

Dogs also bark when they are happy, playful or excited. But these are short barking sprees — not the continuous, complaining, unhappy, bark-after-bark kind that drives neighbors to distraction.

Endless barking comes mostly from boredom. Confine a dog to a small yard with nothing else to do, and he may discover that barking provides company and passes the time. If this form of barking isn't curbed quickly, it becomes a habit and whenever the dog is confined and bored, he'll begin to bark. Some dogs who are unhappy at being left behind or chained in one place will also voice their misery through continuous barking.

The remedy for this type of problem barking varies from dog to dog. In the first place, the dog's owner must be aware of the nuisance and of how disturbing it is to neighbors. Then he must take steps to remedy it.

With some dogs, simply surprising them with a sharp, verbal reprimand will stop the noise. If they're used to following orders and aren't well set in the barking syndrome, you may be able to stop the habit before it becomes established.

People have been successful at stopping nuisance barking by throwing an object that lands with a loud noise and startles the dog into silence. Five or six empty tin cans tied together on a rope is an effective noisemaker that can be thrown from a distance.

Rather than throw the cans at the dog, throw them against the fence to his enclosure. When he stops barking you can reinforce this noise with a sharp verbal command: "No! Quiet!! Cut that out!" or what-have-you. Since dogs don't like the rattling of tin cans any more than people like dog barking, this is very effective.

Striking an object with a stick also works with some dogs. So does the dramatic tactic of emptying a bucket of cold water on the dog whenever he begins to nuisance bark. You simply keep a bucket of water within your reach (but out of the dog's) and hurl it at him when he barks. Again, tell him to shut up, and be firm about it.

MODERN RESEARCH into animal behavior shows that one of the most effective corrective measures to use on a dog is to grasp him by the scruff of the neck, lift his forelegs off the ground and shake him. This is the way adult pack members in wolf and wild dog families reprimand their young, and it works with domestic dogs as well.

Since you are not striking the dog, no hand-shyness results. And since you're "talking his language" by using canine behavior tactics, he's more likely to respond positively than to a human behavior command.

One of the best ways to stop nuisance barking is by not putting the dog in a situation where he resorts to it. We have always wondered why people who keep their dogs chained all the time or banished outside bother to have them at all. If you want a dog as a pet, why not bring him inside and keep him with you? He'll certainly be a better companion for the humanizing he receives.

That's not to say that dogs shouldn't be let out in a well-fenced area for some fresh air, sunlight, a romp and to relieve themselves. We can also understand that dogs aren't the handiest thing to have indoors when you're waxing the floors. But bring him back inside again. Even if he does nothing but watch you as you work, he'll be more content being near you than he ever could be all alone outside.

There are people who keep dogs simply as watchdogs and therefore believe the dog belongs outdoors. If you stop to reason it through, a watchdog is less effective out behind the house than he would be inside. Any burglar knows where your dog is and he's more likely to chance entering your house once he's discovered that the dog can't get indoors to possibly deter him.

It's been proven by insurance company studies that a dog inside a house is one of the most effective burglar-deterrents. Even a small dog is avoided by the professional thief, who appreciates the dog's alerting bark. And the sound of a large dog issuing forth from behind your door is really a powerful safeguard for your home — even if you know he wouldn't hurt a fly.

We've always believed that the reason for owning a pet is to have companionship, affection and that special rapport that develops between humans and the animals they care for. If those are your reasons for keeping a dog, then you defeat your purpose by keeping the dog restricted to the outdoors and away from your company.

Questions & Answers About P.G.&E.'s Zero Interest Program...

Q. What is ZIP?

ZIP is P.G.&E.'s Zero Interest Program that allows Homeowner's and Landlords FREE Financing to insulate and apply other energy conservation features to their homes. Loans can be made up to $3,500 per unit, paid back in 50 or 100 months with NO INTEREST.

Q. Is ZIP a Gimmick?

Not at all! ZIP is one of the results of the National Energy Policy Act signed into law by Pres. Carter in 1978. The act requires each state to set up a Residential Conservation Service (RCS) program which mandates that utilities offer their customers an energy audit as well as arranging services for the installation and financing of applicable energy conservation measures. ZIP is P.G.&E.'s answer to encourage energy conservation. Studies show that it's cheaper to conserve energy through weatherizing than to buy expensive fuel and build new power plants. Hence the ZIP loan.

Q. So Who's Paying for ZIP?

All of us. The California Public Utilities Commission authorized $29,000,000. in rates to cover administrative costs of the program. A financial subsidiary and project financing is used to raise capital for the loans. According to P.G.&E., ZIP will cost about $374. per P.G.&E. customer over the life of the program. We're all paying for ZIP... Let's use it.

Father Farrell's wisdom

Good will needs to be distributed

Carmel Rotary, La Playa Inn July 28, 1982

Rabbi Abraham "Abe" Haselkorn formerly of Temple Beth El, Salinas and for years a co-worker on the staff of Soledad prison, was a great friend of mine. He was also the perennial secretary to Salinas Rotary. When he died recently, I was away so I was unable to attend his funeral but his memory always will remain fresh and stimulating.

Like so many good rabbis, he was steeped in the traditions of the Talmud — especially in Jewish folklore. He had an appropriate story or parable for every occasion. When I described the poverty I had seen in India, he related the story of Rabbi Mendel's visit with Elijah to heaven and hell. (It is an old classic but he made no apology nor do I)

Elijah led the rabbi into a large room where a dozen men sat at a table laden with every imaginable type of rich food. Each man had a six-foot-long wooden spoon strapped to his right arm. They were unable to feed themselves so they sat amidst plenty and starved. This was hell. When Elijah took Rabbi Mendel to heaven the scene was exactly the same. However, they were using the long wooden spoons to feed each other.

Rabbi Haselkorn contended that by cooperation we could solve the world's hunger problem and International Rotary agrees with him. Service above self is the miracle which can solve so many problems that seem unsolvable.

World agronomists say that there is plenty of food to feed a hungry world "with some left over." We need proper distribution but most of all we need good will and a good heart.

Oh Lord, help us to see that the solution for problems begin with us, today. It does no good to wring our hands and cry — we begin to share with a hand and a handout even from our meagre store. It is better to light one candle than to curse the darkness. Amen.

It's a 'Picnic' under stars

THE OUTDOOR FOREST Theater in Carmel provides a unique setting for the romantic drama, Picnic, staged through Sept. 4. The venerable old theater offers breathtaking views of sunsets glimpsed through towering pines. The stage is flanked by twin fireplaces that add both atmosphere and warmth to the productions. This photo shows the set for Picnic, William Inge's play about a day in the life of a small Kansas town. Curtains are at 8:30 p.m. Thursdays through Saturdays. The theater is at Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel. (Alan McEwen photo)

County fair comes to town!

It's Ferris wheel, clown-and-balloon and cotton candy time again! The Monterey County Fair begins Tuesday, Aug. 17 and continues through Sunday, Aug. 22, bigger, better and more loaded with top-name entertainment than ever.

Las Vegas performer Wayne Newton will make a rare appearance at a county fair when he performs two concerts Wednesday, Aug. 18 in the 5,000 seat Pattee Arena.

Other musical headliners include Dr. Hook, Thursday, Aug. 19; Wolfman Jack and his Oldies but Goodies show, Friday, Aug. 20 and country-singer-turned-actor, Mac Davis, Saturday, Aug. 21. All performances will be at 7 and 9:15 p.m. in the main arena.

COUNTRY SINGER Sylvia, whose records are at the top of the charts, will perform in a free concert to open the 1982 Monterey County Fair. Her concert, free to fairgoers, will be at 7 p.m., Tuesday, Aug. 17, in the 5,000 seat main arena at the Monterey County Fairgrounds, Garden and Fairgrounds Roads, Monterey. Other entertainers scheduled for the County Fair, Aug. 17 through Aug. 22 include Wayne Newton, Mac Davis, Wolfman Jack and other top acts.

Free daylong entertainment will be performed on three outdoor stages all six days of the fair. Featured acts include Glenn Ash, Life, Gun-Shy and Charlie Red.

Fair attractions include musicians, singers, dancers, gymnasts, belly dancers, rock bands, old-time music, a Diaper Derby, Chili Cookoff and much more.

There will be hundreds of carnival rides, games of chance, demonstrations, competitions and, of course, every type of food imaginable.

All the traditional country fair exhibits of crafts, floral arrangement, photography, homemaking and fine arts will be on view, as will major exhibitions and sales of livestock and agricultural products.

An expanded carnival midway, plus the Happy Time Circus, free to fairgoers, will be part of an expanded Kiddieland for children.

Parking is limited and fairgoers are urged to use carpools or take the bus. Monterey-Salinas Transit buses Nos. 6, 8, 9, 10, 15 and 21 will provide bus service to the fairgrounds approximately every 15 minutes.

Fares are 50 cents from Monterey Peninsula cities and $1 from Salinas and Carmel Valley. Exact change is required. Fairgoers should contact MST at 899-2557 or 424-7695 for information on schedules and bus stop locations. There will be no MST service during evening hours.

Monterey Savings will sponsor a special attendance day Wednesday, Aug. 18, the second full day of the fair, designated as Monterey Savings Day.

Through the use of special free tickets, available at all Monterey Savings offices and downtown Monterey merchants, fairgoers gain admittance to the grounds at half the price of regular admission fees. In addition, the same ticket entitles the bearer to a free soft drink with the purchase of an ear of corn or a hot dog, at the Monterey Kiwanis Club booth.

Admission is $3 for adults, $2 for children 12 and under. Those 65 and older get in at half price until 6 p.m. Friday, Aug. 20 — Senior Citizens Day. And on Thursday, Aug. 19 — Kids Ronald McDonald Day — children 12 and under get in free until 6 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 17 — Pepsi Family Day — coupons available on Pepsi products in local stores allow admission at half price.

Fair hours are 10 a.m.-11 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday, Aug. 17-22.

The fairgrounds are at Fairgrounds and Garden roads, Monterey. For further details, phone 372-5863.

G.K. Rothe works shown in Carmel

An exhibit of paintings, drawings and tapestries by G. H. Rothe will be open with a reception for the artist at Atelier Galerie on Saturday, Aug. 14 from 3-6 p.m. The gallery is on Dolores and Fifth, Carmel.

Gatja Rothe very often works for a day, a night and another full day before sleeping six or seven hours. She rarely leaves her beloved Carmel studio.

She has found her own perfect medium and everything she has to say can be heard through the sensual, often erotic mezzotint images she creates.

Rothe was born in Beuthen (Poland after 1945) and lived in Germany where Ludwig von Siegen invented the mezzotint technique in the 17th century, and where the art flourished for over 200 years. The principal of this most difficult, tedious and time-consuming method of printmaking is to bring the light out of darkness.

Rothe has always searched for the light. In 1954 she earned an apprenticeship in jewelry-making in Westfahlen, Germany, and received the degree of journeyman. She entered the Master School of Pforzheim, Germany in 1956 to study art. She then spent more than 10 years working in oil paintings, drawings and etchings.

In 1968 she was awarded the Villa Roman Preis, one of Europe's most prestigious and coveted fellowships. For a year she was provided with a magnificent studio and apartment in the Villa Romana in Florence, and all the materials necessary to practice any form of art she chose.

Rothe spent much of her time in Florence at the Museum of Anatomy where she worked on huge and intricate drawings of the human body.

She is perhaps best known for her dance pieces in which her precise knowledge of anatomy gives foundation to her free invention of body forms. In her search for an ideal place to live and work, Rothe travelled to England, Russia, France, Spain and Uruguay before taking up residence in New York City in 1970. After spending seven years in New York and studying at the Art Students League, she moved to Carmel, where she now lives.

At the Art Students League, she began working in aquatint, but this medium was not satisfying enough. In looking for the ideal technique to express her ideas, she discovered mezzotint. Carving her highly detailed figures right onto the metal plate was far more difficult, but the results pleased her. As a jeweler with a profound knowledge of metal, she feels, "the most noble technique is just good enough. Hard labour is unquestionably necessary."

Since 1966 she has had one-man shows in 14 European, South American and American cities: among them, New York, Chicago and Washington D.C. Her work is collected by museums and corporations world-wide.

Rothe sums up her art: "My art is not visionary; that would imply something beyond reality. It comes from a process of work, thought and experience. What finally appears has a long history. I intend a message, a visual message, because words are not sufficient."

The public is welcome to meet Miss Rothe at the reception.

PEACE, a mezzotint by artist G.H. Rothe, is part of a new exhibition of paintings, drawings and tapestries by Rothe at Atelier Galerie, Dolores and Sixth, Carmel. There will be a reception for the artist Saturday, Aug. 14 from 3-6 p.m.

Film review:

Film of 'Garp' similar to John Irving's novel

By ANNE TELFORD

The World According to Garp. With Robin Williams, Glenn Close and Mary Beth Hurt. Written by Steve Tesich. Directed by George Roy Hill. A Warner Brothers release.

Fans of John Irving's The World According to Garp won't be disappointed by the film version starring Robin Williams as the bemused, put-upon Garp.

The film is remarkably similar to the novel. Both are full of a thinly disguised dread; tragedy and joy intertwine to create an off-beat yet engaging story.

Garp leaves you with an ominous feeling. It is about the cyclical patterns of life and the inability of people to accept other's lifestyles without condemnation or violence. In Garp's case violence dodges his heels and people find it difficult to accept his eccentric mother.

Garp's mother Jenny wanted a baby, not a wedding ring. As a nurse, she was able to have a no-strings, one shot affair with a dying sergeant, thereby producing Garp.

Garp grows up as a precocious child with a penchant for attempting or pretending to fly. The opening credits roll as a cute baby flies in and out of viewing range, aptly demonstrating Garp's later supposition of being able to "see the arc of your life." The audience is able to view the arc of not only Garp's life but that a Jenny Fields, his mother, as well.

Garp's early life unfolds at the Steering Prep School for Boys where his mother is the nurse. He takes up wrestling and develops a passion for Helen, a bookish student he later marries.

Any description of the plot of Garp will only serve to confound those who have not read the bestseller it's based on. In truth, any description of the plot would only sound surreal anyway! How do you explain Ellen Jamesians to the uninitiated?

Robin Williams' Garp contains the proper sense of humor so vital to the role, but adds another dimension to Williams' acting credentials. Garp is essentially a serious role: Garp the writer of serious fiction, Garp the eternal husband and loving father to Duncan and Walt. He cooks, cleans and cries; in other words, he is a fully developed male character, and those are as rare in film as they are in literature.

The over-riding theme of the novel and the film is the great "Under-Toad," that mysterious something out there that just might eventually get you (and usually does). It comes from Walt's childish mispronunciation of "undertow" but is thoroughly applicable to any of life's thinly buried dangers.

As Jenny, the antiseptically dressed, rabble rousing mother of Garp, theater actress Glenn Close is excellent. She conformed quite well to my mental image of the author of Sexual Suspect, Jenny's sensational feminist autobiography that is so pivotal to the plot.

In a supporting role as Robert Muldoon, the former Philadelphia Eagles tight-end who has undergone a sex-change operation and become Roberta Muldoon, John Lithgow is wonderful. He is a warm and sympathetic character as the woman companion/protector to Jenny and friend to Garp.

Mary Beth Hurt's Helen is a perfect counterpoint to Garp. She is supporting and accepting but unintentionally causes a major tragedy and disruption in all their lives.

Garp effectively blends humor and pathos into an entertaining film that will make you think.

What's playing at the movies

Body Heat: A typical 40s film theme. Kathleen Turner is a sexually overpowering woman who influences a weak man, William Hurt, to become a killer. Richard Crenna plays the husband. Set in a small town in Florida. Rated R. At the Hill Theatre.

Diner: The film is set in Baltimore in 1959, and a mixed group of Jewish and Catholic buddies in their early twenties stay up Friday nights comparing notes on girls, lapping up French fries at their favorite diner, and tearing around town. Starring an outstanding group of young actors: Kevin Bacon, Mickey Rourke, Steve Guttenberg, Timothy Daly, Paul Reiser and Daniel Stern. Rated R. At the Dream Theater.

E.T.: The Extra-Terrestrial million-dollar creature from outer space who has a magical life of its own. A Steven Spielberg fantasy. Rated PG. At the Valley Cinema.

Fast Times at Ridgemont High: A comedy about kids after graduation doing everything they wanted to do but couldn't. Rated R. At the Regency.

Firefox: Produced and directed by and starring Clint Eastwood. Eastwood plays an American fighter pilot chosen to steal a sophisticated Russian jet, the most devastating killing machine ever built. Rated PG. At the State Three Cinemas.

Force of Vengeance: Another Chuck Norris film. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Friday 13th Part III: A new dimension in terror — in 3 D. At the Dream Theater.

Ted Hamilton also co-stars as the Pirate King. Filmed entirely on location in Australia. Rated P.G. At the Center Cinemas.

Ricardo Montalban plays the malevolent Khan. A movie for Trekkies. Rated PG. At the Dream Theater.

Things Are Tough All Over: Cheech and Chong playing dual roles. Tommy Chong plays a maniacal Arab with a nose only a bedouin could love. Cheech plays his brother whose head is made up to look like a billiard ball with a hair transplant. Together, these two strange looking oil-rich Arabs take off across the desert in pursuit of two other strange looking characters Cheech and Chong, the laid-back dopers we're all used to. A film that is fun-filled hysteria. Rated R. At the Village Theater.

The World According to Garp: Robin Williams is outstanding as Garp, who has a funny way of looking at life. The film is based on the best selling novel by John Irving. A far-out comedy. Rated R. At the Golden Bough.

Xanadu: Olivia Newton-John plays an Olympian muse who appears on earth to satisfy the wishes of a young artist, played by Michael Beck, and a one-time nightclub owner, Gene Kelly. Music abounds in this screen fantasy, with Olivia and the Electric Light Orchestra supplying the sound. Rated PG. At the Center Cinemas.

Young Doctors In Love: A comedy romance with complications that parodies hospital soaps, TV shows and movies. Starring are Michael McKean and Sean Young. Rated R. At the State Three Cinemas.

Music Seminars program. The program is designed to provide an intensive performance and educational training experience for young high school musicians.

A college accredited program, Hidden Valley brings together several leading music educators for the three Past performances by Hidden Valley Youth Orchestras have earned wide-ranging critical acclaim.

Two additional concerts are scheduled and will be performed Sunday, Aug. 22 at 8 p.m. at Carmel Mission and Sunday, Aug. 29 at 2:30 p.m. in the Hidden Valley Theater in Carmel Valley. There is no admission charge for any of the concerts.

Carmelite captures his village in photographs

The Thunderbird Bookshop in The Barnyard, Highway 1 and Rio Road, Carmel, will host an autograph party for local photographer John Livingstone, who will sign copies of his new book, Carmel By Itself: Portrait of a Unique American Community, Sunday, Aug. 15 from 3-5 p.m. Unusual for a book of photography,

Carmel By Itself will be captioned in five languages: French, Spanish, German, Japanese and English.

Livingstone's fascination with photography began in 1945 while he was an Army criminal investigations agent in Paris. He was handed a 35mm camera and assigned the task of surreptitiously photographing the activities of black marketeers who were looting American supplies from railway freight cars.

His first attempts at "serious" photography centered around life in the streets of Paris in the aftermath of the war.

While a student at the Army Language School in Monterey (now the Defense Language Institute), Livingstone was a frequent visitor at the home of the late Edward Weston, one of the world's foremost practitioners and pioneer in large format photography.

From his conversations with Weston and another photographer, Wynn Bullock, Livingstone grew aware of the craftsmanship and technical virtuosity made possible by such a camera. He became convinced, however, that the bulk and slowness of operation of the large format camera severely restricted the scope of subject matter to that of static still life, scenery and architecture.

Livingstone's fondness for photographing everyday life dictates the use of small, unobtrusive 35mm and 6x6 cameras.

Following a course in commercial illustration at Brooks Institute of Photography in Santa Barbara, Livingstone established a commercial photography business in Carmel in 1955. He retired from commercial photography in 1965 and resumed his studies at the UC, Santa Barbara, where he received a masters degree in Spanish.

Instilled with a strong respect for the technical excellence of the work of Weston, Bullock and Ansel Adams, Livingstone has given priority to subject matter, unencumbered by the restraints imposed by the large format camera.

The public is welcome to meet the author. For further information, phone 624-1803.

The new play by Bay Area playwright John O'Keefe, Ghosts will be performed Feb. 4-5, 11-12, 18-19, 25-26.

On St. Patrick's Day the Irish Gala No. 6, adapted by Cherry Foundation artistic director Dan Gotch, will be staged.

Home by David Storey, author of the novel This Sporting Life, will be staged April 22-23, 29-30, May 6-7 and 13-14.

All performances will be on Fridays and Saturdays in Cherry Hall. Guaranteed seating for the four-play series is available in advance by making a tax-deductible minimum donation of $10 per person to the Cherry Foundation. # Juan Archuleta nature studies to be shown

KING'S CANYON, by Juan Archuleta, is one of the artist's paintings of nature scenes to be included in an exhibit of his work at Miner's Gallery Americana, Lincoln and Sixth, Carmel. A reception for the artist is planned Saturday, Aug. 14 from 4-7 p.m.

Gallery Americana will give a reception for Juan Archuleta Saturday, Aug. 14 from 4-7 p.m. to open his one-man show at the Gallery, Lincoln and Sixth, Carmel.

Archuleta celebrates the mountains and forests of California in a fresh and very personal way. His mastery of the combination of subtle washes and bold impasto is uniquely his own, with a fascinating change of response to varying lights and times of day.

He combines mountains, rocks and redwoods and blends them with mists, sunlight, flowers and streams. His paintings reflect the serenity and varying forces of the forests he understands so well.

Archuleta grew up in California and his love for the glories of the state's wilderness is apparent in his work. Educated at various Bay Area colleges and schools, he has a deep interest in ancient history, contemporary poetry and ecological philosophy as well as painting.

The public is welcome to the reception.

For further information, phone 624-5071.

THE TRADER, an acrylic painting by Kent Butler, will be displayed at Shell Fisher's Gallery in Carmel as part of a Western Art & Wall Hangings exhibition. Works by Butler, Trudy Craine and Tom Hodges will be shown. There will be a reception for the artists at the gallery Friday and Saturday, Aug. 13-14 from 4-8 p.m.

Three western artists display new paintings and wall hangings

The second exhibition of Western Art & Wall Hangings will open at Shell Fisher's Gallery with a reception for artists Kent Butler, Trudy Craine and Tom Hodges Friday and Saturday Aug. 13-14 from 4-8 p.m.

Kent Butler has won numerous awards in juried shows and is represented in private collections throughout the West. His love for the American scene stems from a childhood spent in Gunnison, Utah, a small farming community.

Butler received his formal art training at the University of Utah and the Los Angeles Art Center.

Tom Hodges' childhood heroes were cowboys. Although he could not become one because he contracted polio at an early age, his appreciation of the American cowboy enabled him to live out his boyhood fantasies in his art. Hodges feels that Western art is the one true American art form.

Born in Florida and raised in the south, he earned his degree in commercial art and illustration at the Ringling School of Art in Sarasota, Fla., and later attended Chouinard Art Institute in Los Angeles.

Hodges' pastoral scenes are serene. He also enjoys tactile art forms such as weaving, leatherwork and macrame. "In painting, I feel you are trying to capture three dimensions on a two dimensional surface and in working with these other media, I can create three dimensions in the art object much like a sculptor."

Trudy Craine is a collector of Indian pottery and artifacts and enjoys visiting old ghost towns and Indian reservations.

Craine's background is in commercial art and advertising design. Her oils, watercolors, pen and ink and pencil subjects stem from the things she loves and has been familiar with.

The Shell Fisher Gallery is at San Carlos and Fifth, Carmel. For further information, phone 625-3007.

Cypressaires to serenade at Forest Theater

It's time for a repeat performance by the Cypressaires! The popular barbershop group will perform Sunday, Aug. 15 at 2 p.m. at the outdoor Forest Theater as part of the Sunday Afternoon Concert Series sponsored by the City of Carmel and Sunset Cultural Center.

The Cypressaires represent the Monterey Peninsula in the national Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, the largest all-male singing organization in the world. They are perennial favorites at their many local appearances.

The Cypressaires love to share four-part harmony.

The 50-man chorus and quartets will feature good old tunes, nostalgia and fun. They promise a return to yesteryear that only barbershoppers can create.

The outdoor Forest Theater is at Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel. There is no admission charge.

Lively arts series presents outstanding fare

By RICHARD TYLER

THE LIVELY Arts Series at Sunset Center is only two years old. Yet in that time we have been able to present outstanding performers who otherwise would not have been seen in our community.

The opening event of these series featuring Pat Carroll as Gertrude Stein was a great success. Last season Anna Russell made one of her too infrequent stage appearances on the West Coast and gave Carmel a hilarious evening to remember. Anne Baxter, a very gracious lady, was on that same series which also brought to Carmel its first encounter with Les Ballet Trockadero de Monte Carlo.

We all want to continue to have this kind of entertainment available to us in our community. When you consider the costs of planning an excursion to "the City" for the very entertainers that we are now able to bring to Carmel, local presentations warrant the support of all of us. Many of the major theatrical agencies are becoming more aware of the market that exists in such cultural centers as Carmel and are planning to make available more of the artists that we would want to present in our theaters.

But, let me tell you a little more about the current season and the very special group of artists that we have gathered.

Albert Einstein conjures up a brainy sort of lecture, but as Ed Metzger portrays him we meet the personal man, the humorous man, the insightful man who looks at the frailties of man and helps us to live with them. Ed Metzger has received plaudits for this performance. He debuted Einstein in October of 1978 at a small theater in Los Angeles where the show played to capacity houses for three months. The reviews were so enthusiastic that "everyone was stunned," he said. "And I must say that I was stunned myself."

Since then he has continued to play to full houses in Washington, D.C., Detroit, San Francisco, and New York City where the New York Times referred to his performances as one of genius and pixie!

You may recognize Ed Metzger from his television appearances in such series as Kojak, Baretta, Bionic Woman, Mannix, Bonanza, and High Chaparral, and in films: Relections in a Golden Eye with Elizabeth Taylor and Marlon Brando and Do, Day Afternoon with Al Pacino.

For those of you who know Martha Schlamme, I do not have to talk about her; but for those of you who have never had any contact with this performer, this is what one reviewer wrote:

"In an era of hyperkinetic superstars who assault our aural perceptions at high decibel levels, substituting energy and sheer volume of sound for talent and musicality, Martha Schlamme's bittersweet and gently nostalgic Concert Cabaret is a rare and welcome treat for frazzled nerves.

"Like Jean Brodie, Miss Schlamme is in her prime, a fine figure of a woman, and a genuine artist. She is one of the few European stars who has made herself at home in America where she has built up a huge following and has enjoyed considerable success in New York. Her unique brand of entertainment has illuminated such Broadway productions as The World of Kurt Weill in Song, The Three Penny Opera, and Country People, to name but a few. And she also has the distinction of being one of the few vocalists to have appeared some years back at Canada's Stratford Festival."

Her Concert Cabaret is in some ways a distillation of many of these and combines some of the best known and best loved songs of Kurt Weill (Pirate Jenny among others) with more recent works by Stephen Sondheim, Melissa Manchester, Carol Hall, and Richard Maltby interspersing them with folk songs in Yiddish and German, a Hassidic chant, snatches of poems by Dorothy Parker, Edna St. Vincent Millay and others and unsentimental and deeply felt comments on some of her own personal memories.

DONT GET the wrong idea. Concert Cabaret is not one of those heavy trips back into the past. Miss Schlamme may have a few scars, but she conceals them well. She is an entertainer first and foremost.

An ironic sense of humor pervades the evening; an atmosphere of relaxation is created almost at once; and Miss Schlamme, with the help of accompanist Steven Blier, who anticipates her every nuance, achieves rapport with her audience on a very personal level that only a truly fine artist is capable of creating. She reaches for no theatrical effects; she doesn't have to. Her style is straight forward, down to earth, and honest. And one comes away with a feeling of warmth and genuine affection for the lady. Don't miss her.

There is nothing more that I can add to the raves that the Chinese Magic Circus of Taiwan has received in their two previous appearances at the Sunset Theater. They continue to travel with Liberace with whom they have appeared at all the major clubs in the States. However, for their third appearance at the Center, they are bringing many new acts and material and promise another astounding evening of acrobatics, feats of balance, and some lovely dancing.

The Brass Band is one of the Bay Area's best known musical exports yet locally seems to be among our least appreciated instrumental ensembles.

Talk about "acres of diamonds in our own backyard." This quintet of brass instrument madcaps has won awards and fans from the small theater to the largest concert auditoriums in Australia. Yet after a decade of performing in their home stomping grounds, they are only now gaining the recognition (and the adulation) they have long since served and earned.

Not thoughtlessly is the Brass Band called the Musical Marx Brothers, nor is the lavish praise from the most critical of musical authorities misapplied. These gentlemen are — first — brilliant brass instrumentalists and — second — hilarious and carefully programmed musical zanies.

Like all great comedy acts, the Brass Band starts from a base of great professional skill. One cannot burlesque various instrumental styles and classical compositions until unquestioned ability to perform on that instrument has been proven. The stage routines, costumes, bad (and good) puns, and fun bright instrumental help emphasize the truly magnificent instrumental work of the brass bandmen.

They will conclude a six-month national tour with their appearance at Sunset Center. Help welcome them to our community.

The dates for these appearances are as follows:

Ed Metzger as Albert Einstein, The Practical Bohemian, Saturday Oct. 16, 1982.

Martha Schlamme, a Concert Cabaret, Wednesday, Nov. 17, 1982.

The Chinese Magic Circus of Taiwan, Thursday, Jan. 20, 1983.

The Brass Band, Saturday, April 9, 1983.

And, of course, the indomitable Les Ballet Trockadero de Monte Carlo will be making their second appearance at Sunset Theater on Wednesday, Feb. 16, 1983. There is also the ever popular Carmel Festival of Dance but more about that at some future time.

This is the season of Lively Arts — one which I think is varied, entertaining, and will introduce to our audiences a

Theater review:

A bawdy production of 'Merchant of Venice'

By ANNE TELFORD

IN A RIOTOUS burst of color and sound the characters emerged for the opening scene of Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice. The opening night production of the Monterey Peninsula Shakespeare Festival at the Monterey Peninsula College Theater evinced none of the jitters or faux pas frequently anticipated with opening nights.

The pace was fast throughout, action never lagged and the production bristled with enthusiasm and good cheer.

In fact, director Edward EmmanuEL's production probably would have pleased the Bard himself! It is full of bawdy, broad gestures, noise, laughter, intrigue and well-delivered speeches. Some of the action has been updated a bit, with two or three scenes smacking of Saturday Night Live deliveries, but this in no way detracts from the play.

The dramatis personae were uniformly impressive. Terry Amoon was an assertive, willful Portia, countered by Steven Martin's sensitive but strong Bassanio. Their romantic scenes were engaging — those were real kisses that lent believability to the central romance.

If your Shakespeare is a bit rusty, we'll recap the plot. Shylock is one of the most successful money lenders in Venice who finds himself in the unique position of controlling the destiny of Antonio, one of the city's busiest merchants. As the pivotal figures, Shylock and Antonio, Hal Peiken and Henry Littlefield were both excellent. Antonio was gentle, self-effacing and loving; Shylock was justifiably vengeful, if not overly maudlin on occasion. One images it wasn't easy to be a Jew in Venice 1575 and Peiken successfully conveys Shylock's innate humanity.

Howard Hinckley as the Prince of Morocco was a delight. With his mirror, flower and attendant in tow (to spray him with perfume when he becomes flustered) he was reminiscent of a camp Dom DeLuise.

As the Prince of Aragon, Fred Dodge played his scene with Portia to its full comedic potential. The scene in which he must decide which chest to choose is like a child playing ceniemeenie and had the audience in stitches.

Perhaps the most amusing scenes were those in which Stephen Moorer as Launcelot Gobbo teases and confuses his father (Phil Pratt), with many asides to the audience and a delivery very similar to John Belushi's best moments on late night TV.

A COMPLEX, intriguing story involving three romantic subplots and an overriding theme of revenge, Merchant is a difficult play to attempt. It is to the credit of all involved that the production is consistently entertaining, blending humor and pathos, intrigue and romance.

Constance Gamiere's lavish costumes gorgeously reflect the era historically while adding another dimension of professionalism to the play.

Joan Larkey's masterful lighting creates dimension and

Films depict jazz, old age

The Jazz Age and a profile of an elderly man are the subjects of two short films to be shown at the Monterey Public Library, 625 Pacific Street, Monterey today at 2 p.m. The films are free and open to the public.

Jazz Age captures the spirit of the fabled decade in American life when the nation swung into an exuberant time of pleasure seeking and prosperity.

The film Sykes deals with Sykes Williams, a blind, Irish pensioner who lives with his wife in a run-down Chicago neighborhood. He plays the piano two nights a week to supplement his pension.

lends the proper atmosphere to Dennis Howes' powerful set. With its graceful columns, revolving stage and movable gondola, the set manages to evoke a complex city in action.

My only criticism of Merchant is that the crowd scenes are a bit noisy and rambunctious for a small theater. Some of the children's screams were a little ear-piercing. The immediacy and life that the citizens of Venice add to the production is authentic and essential; if toned down a bit they would be even more effective.

During intermission five beautiful harps were set up and five attractive young women came onstage and played Renaissance music. This was a delightful note and went along perfectly with the time and setting of Merchant.

Lori Eitoku from Salinas, Julia Weber and Ibi Jenko of Monterey, Patty Jo Pullman of Pacific Grove and Aileen Han of Carmel, who is also the harpist with the Monterey County Youth Orchestra, performed. They are all students of Edwina Bain, harp instructor, who has a studio in Carmel and teaches at the Monterey Peninsula Community School of Music.

This was a nice touch and the harpists will hopefully be back for future performances during the Festival.

Merchant of Venice will be performed in repertory with The Taming of the Shrew through Aug. 28. Wednesday through Saturday performances will be at 8 p.m. and Sunday matinees are at 2 p.m.

Backgammon

The aggressive move

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Black has made the opening move, running out of your home board with a 6-4. Despite the large number of good rolls that you could have made, you foolishly rolled a 5-1. How do you play it?

Most players take the five by moving down from the midpoint to the 8-point and then look around for a convenient one. The stodgy players split the runners by moving from Black's 1-point to his 2-point. More enterprising players drop the White 5-point by starting a blot from the 6-point to the 5-point.

Some good players take the five from the White 6-point, hitting the blot on the White 1-point. The most convenient one then is to move one of the men on Black's 1-point to the 2-point.

The most aggressive move of all, and perhaps the best, is to move out from Black's 1-point to his bar point. Black has a very poor chance to hit you and make the point; and if he hits you and leaves a blot on his bar point, you have many return shots. If Black fails to hit you on his bar point, you stand a fine chance of hitting any blot he may leave or of making his bar point.

Would you like to have Alfred Sheinwold teach you how to play backgammon? A 12-lesson booklet will be on the way to you when you send $1 plus a stamped, self-addressed, No. 10 envelope to Backgammon, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1000, Los Angeles, Calif. 90053.

Take a close look!

If you haven't seen Village Green lately, chances are you're in for a pleasant surprise or two.

We've just completed making an already beautiful and intimate community of 22 single-family attached homes even more so... in keeping with the surrounding Carmel Valley community. We've added more mature landscaping to accent the rustic setting and there's now a fully-decorated model of our Plan B floorplan as well as a vignette of Plan A.

Exteriors crafted with cedar siding and shake roofs blend beautifully with landscaped front yards and individually fenced rear yards to give Village Green a special natural charm.

Best of all, we've added value to Village Green by drastically reducing prices to those who buy a new Village Green home today.

See for yourself Carmel Valley's best new-home value. See Village Green today.
